TRUE TO FIRST LOVE.

Lexington Lady Married to First Lover
After a Separation 40 years.

A unique wedding service was at the First Parish Unitarian church, Sunday, when Mrs. Lucy Gould Whitney, of Lexington, was married to Captain William Allen Harris, of New York city. Forty years before the two were lovers and sang together in the choir of the church where they were united after so long a separation. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Carlton A. Staples at the close of the regular morning service, and was witnessed by a large congregation.

The church was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies, daisies, ferns and other choice plants and flowers. As the bridal party moved down the aisle to the chancel the wedding march from Lohengrin was played on the organ by Mrs. H. G. Locke. The party comprised the bride and groom, Thomas G. Whitney, a son of the bride, Mrs. T. G. Whitney, George Whiting, a son of the groom, and Miss Melissia Whiting, the three latter grandchildren of the bride. There was no best man but Miss Melissia Whiting acted as maid of honor.

The bride wore a handsome dress of brown travelling cloth, with a bonnet to match, and carried a bouquet of white pinks. The maid of honor wore white muslin.

A wedding breakfast was served at the house of the bride on Waltham street, immediate relatives and friends being guests.

Capt. and Mrs. Harris received many beautiful gifts. On their return from a brief wedding trip they will reside on Waltham street.

The Boston Globe gives the following interesting account of the life of Capt. Harris:

At the age of 15, Capt. Harris made his first cruise on the coast of the Mediterranean and at that time began the study of navigation, which he continued till he was proficient in the science.

In 1858 the ship he was on came upon a Spanish brigantine with all her officers and nearly all her crew dead from yellow fever. This was on a voyage to Buenos Ayres. The stricken ship was supplied with provisions and sent to Baltimore.

On the way from Buenos Ayres to Savannah the ship caught fire and narrowly escaped destruction 300 miles off the coast of Brazil. On the same passage the ship became short of provisions.

It was after the return from this voyage that the captain left his affianced bride to be gone a year or more. Through wreck and delay from other causes he did not see her again for nearly six years, and by that time she was married to another man.

It was in 1864 that Capt. Harris was wrecked off the mouth of the Yangtze-kang river. The vessel was a total loss, but the captain established himself ashore and made a local editor of a paper published in Chinese and English in Hongkong. Henry Ward Beecher's half brother, Rev. James C. Beecher, called the "fighting chaplain" was the editor-in-chief.

Then by the appointment of Gen. Jas. Keenan, who was consul of Hongkong, he was made chief marshal of that city. In this capacity he was sent in charge of a captain, mate and two sailors, to the United States on board the old sloop of war Germantown. This was the last cruise of that old vessel, as she was sent to Charleston, S. C. and sunk there with other vessels to obstruct the harbor in the early war time. The prisoners were given over by the captain to Secretary of State.

In 1861 Capt. Harris was made warden of her majesty's colonial prison in Hongkong. Under him were 57 prisoners and 56 turnkeys. He superintended the hanging of a Malay and four Chinamen for piracy and murder. At this time he was only 19 years old, but was sworn in as being 22. He served one year at the prison and then resigned his position, on the 22nd because of unwillingness to serve the British government even as a civil officer.

He went into the silk district of China, 125 miles inland from Shanghai, and there was an agent in the rebel lines during the Tae Ping rebellion. He was twice captured and threatened with decapitation, and altogether had many unpleasant experiences in the flowery kingdom during the early 60s.

In 1863 on a passage from Hongkong to Shanghai he was wrecked on one of the Loochoo islands. The ship struck a coral reef at night and went to pieces rapidly. Many of the crew were drowned while trying to reach shore, and the survivors lived on fish, including shark, and rice for 24 months. Their abode was a straw hut for this time. Then they were able to go along the chain of islands till they reached Napi, the capital of the Loochoo, where they were well cared for.

They were lodged in an old temple, and were banqueting in the same pavilion in which Commander Perry was given a state dinner. The governor of the island gave the wrecked men a small old junk, which they navigated 600 miles across the China sea without chart or compass.

The same day he was made, and when Capt. Harris arrived at Santhal he found that he had been given up as dead. The consul general had issued letters of administration on his estate, and he had to pay a bill for advertising the same. His obituary had also been published.

For a Christmas present at Shanghai in 1863 the captain got smallpox, and was the sole survivor of five young Americans who had it at the same time.

The captain has made voyages to all parts of the globe. In the Indian ocean at one time his vessel was surrounded by waterpots. His vessel was dismasted in sight of St. Helena and again off the cape of Good Hope.

In 1867 the captain married and went West as manager of a tract of land comprising something like 1,000 acres. His wedding trip was in a buggy across Kansas, where the noble red men were frequently to be encountered. The bride, a ferry across the "big muddy" between St. Joseph and Belmont, Kan.

Since then the captain has been in the publishing, steamboat excursion, and other businesses, including lecturing in Brooklyn and other cities when Henry Ward Beecher, Justin D. Fulton and other eminent men presided.

TRIAL OF ROLAND A. SWAN.

It has just been announced in the Middlesex court at Cambridge that Roland A. Swan will not be tried until the October term of court.

Late Wednesday afternoon a conference was held between the court, District Attorney Weir and Attorney Nelson, who represented Roland A. Swan.

Attorney Nelson claimed that there were so many counts in the indictment that he had not had time to go fairly into the matter, and was therefore unprepared to try the case. Arrangements were made by which the district attorney will have the deposition of Town Treasurer Locke.

FORMALLY DEDICATED.

Large Attendance at Cutter School Exercises in Arlington.

The formal dedication of the Cutter schoolhouse occurred Tuesday evening, in the presence of a large and interested audience. Detailed description of the building has been given in previous issues of the Enterprise. From 6.30 to 7.30 the entire building was thrown open to the inspection of the public.

At 8 o'clock, Mr. Peirce, chairman of the building committee, announced the program for the evening. The exercises were opened by a piano solo rendered by Miss Eliza A. Schwamb, followed by the invocation by Rev. Charles H. Watson, D. D. A song was then rendered in a pleasing way by a selected chorus of the school. Peter Schwamb, chairman of the key to Edwin S. Farmer, chairman of the board of selectmen, gave an interesting history of the building from start to finish.

Mr. Farmer pleasantly accepted the building on behalf of the town of Arlington, in fitting words. Mr. Farmer paid affectionate tribute to the Cutter school district as it was there he received his early education. A second piano solo was rendered by Miss Eliza A. Schwamb.

The address by Hon. Frank A. Hill, secretary of the Massachusetts state board of education, was the leading feature of the evening. Mr. Hill, by way of introductory, said he felt honored by the town of Arlington, inasmuch as the building was one of our ancestors in the schoolhouse in the town in the dedication of which he had taken part. Mr. Hill contrasted the school buildings in Massachusetts as they were fifty years ago with those of today. He congratulated Arlington upon its excellent school buildings, and particularly upon the plan and conveniences of the Cutter school building. Secretary Hill then discussed at some length the advanced philosophy of all school work as now seen in all our public institutions of learning. He spoke of the better preparatory work of teachers in these later years. Of the more than five thousand teachers in the state of Massachusetts, he said the great majority of them are normal graduates. Mr. Hill's entire address was interesting and instructive, and was followed by music by the school.

Miss Ida F. Peirce made the formal presentation of the piano, and the gift was accepted by Timothy O'Leary, a member of the school board. Mr. O'Leary made a telling speech upon the work of our public schools. He is an enthusiastic believer in the democracy of our public school system. He thought that the greatest work of our schools was to be seen in the fact that they so thoroughly Americanized that army of men, women and children coming to this new world from foreign shores. Mr. O'Leary received hearty applause for his earnest and well-timed words.

The flag given by Theodore Schwamb was formally presented by E. Nelson Blake in a speech full of loyalty to the stars and stripes and eloquently delivered. The flag was pleasantly accepted by Miss Jennie A. Chaplain, principal of the school. The singing of America by the school and the audience closed the exercises.

The plan of the building from basement to the audience room on the top floor, and its execution are the outcome of the most careful study and the faithful work. The basement extends under the entire building, and is light and airy. There are eight rooms, as follows: The principal's office, a large room for the principal, a room for the principal's private room, and the teachers' private room are well arranged for comfort and convenience. The slate blackboards are arranged in surface and of latest kind and finish.

The entire cost of the building with grounds and their grading with the furnishing of the several rooms is $42,000. The building committee, Peter Schwamb, Walter H. Peirce, Dr. John P. Bennett, John T. White and E. Nelson Blake, are to be congratulated upon their successful carrying out of their plan in all its details. The architects were Gay & Proctor; general contractor, Henry A. Bellamy; Gratto & Gamet, the carpenter work; Arthur L. Bacon, the plastering; Albert B. Franklin put in the heating and ventilating arrangements; David Craig did the plumbing, and R. W. LeBaron put in the gas and electric discharges. Every man of the above filled the bill.

A PRETTY JUNE WEDDING.

This queen month of roses brought about a pretty June wedding, Wednesday evening at the home of the bride, Alice Torrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bulfinch Colby, Cambridge, 71 Commercial street, Arlington Heights. The contracting parties were Miss Alice Torrey Haskell and Dr. Robert George Butler, of Middleboro.

The marriage ceremony was happily performed by the Rev. Robert G. Woodbridge, pastor of the Central Congregational church in Middleboro. The bride was tastefully gown in white, and the groom in white tulle, elaborately trimmed with white satin ribbon and bobbinets, with demi-train. She wore a tulle veil and a handsome diamond brooch, a gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The dress was trimmed with pearl buckles. Mrs. Haskell wore black organdy over red silk, trimmed with insertion. The flower girls, the Misses Constance Lloyd, Clara Livingston and Ermine Ware, were gowned in white muslin. Daisies were worn in the hair of the bridesmaids and groom, leading to the exquisitely arranged bower of daisies and ferns. The wedding bell hung from the centre of the bower, and the bridesmaids, from the bell to the corners of the room. The initials of the bride and groom were beautifully wrought in leaf and bud as frontpiece to the bower. The background of the bower was what seemed a faraway distance into the sylvan groves of the gods, where dwell the muses. Under this bower were the happy pair. The wedding march was played by Miss Ruth Ratcliffe, of New York city. The interior of the house was decorated throughout with white and blue, and the bride and groom, and to the credit of the young lady friends of the bride it should be said that the decorations were arranged by them with all the taste of the professional artist. The private grounds of the house were brilliantly illuminated by Japanese lanterns, so that the house with its surroundings seemed like fairyland; and the guests, attracted by the brilliancy, the greatest attraction there, and the fairest of all so far, was the fair young bride.

The reception given from eight to ten o'clock was filled brimful with heartiest congratulations to the bride and groom. The collation was served by Caterer Hardy. The presents were handsome and numerous, consisting of silver, cut glass, pictures, and pieces of useful and valuable furniture.

The invited guests at the marriage ceremony were in happy wedding with the fragrance and bloom of the season. The ladies present were in light evening dress. Seldom is witnessed so unique a marriage service, and so delightful a company of wedding guests. The bride's traveling suit was of Oxford gray trimmed with black satin folds. As she, leaning upon the arm of her husband, went to the carriage to be seated, she carried her bouquet of bride's roses in every direction, for which there was the liveliest scramble for the choicest bits of leaf and flower.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler were showered with rice and flowers as they took their departure for their honeymoon trip. The Enterprise extends its congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Butler, offering as its sentiment that immortal saying, "The truth of truth is love."

Miss Jennie Clifton Frost was one of the graduates at Tufts college this week.

GRADUATIONS.

Thirty-one Pupils Announce Their Farewells from High Schools.

"To Be Rather than to Seem," The Arlington Class Presents the Lexington Class Motto — Play of "Hard Handed Craftsmen."

The Lexington town hall was crowded to overflowing, Wednesday evening, when the graduating exercises of the class of 1901 were successfully and creditably performed. The main hall and gallery were filled with friends of the graduates long before the exercises began, and the entire audience showed its appreciation of the efforts of the pupils by frequent rounds of hearty applause.

The hall was decorated with flags and the national colors, and the stage was covered with green foliage, flowers and potted plants. Hemlock furnished a pretty background at the rear of the stage. The decorations showed for themselves that they were carefully planned and as nicely executed by the members of the class and school.

The exercises began promptly at 8

One of the prettiest and most enjoyable graduating exercises under the auspices of the Arlington high school was at the town hall, Thursday evening, when the class of 1901 bid its adieu to the public schools of Arlington. The exercises were short, not lasting over an hour and a half, and with the easy manner in which the entire program stages, accented, the affair was pronounced by all a genuine success. From both a literary and social point of view the graduation was complete, and to the teachers as well as the pupils much credit is due for the happy termination of the affair. From 7.45 o'clock until after midnight, during the formal exercises and the social reception and dance which followed, many friends of the graduates were highly entertained and pleased.

o'clock with a glee song, "Mountain Echoes," by the school, numbering over 60 voices. Rev. Charles H. Watson, D. D., presided, after which Miss Grace Robinson read the following prize essay written by Miss Rena G. Vickery, "The Battle of Lexington."

It was the night of April eighteenth, one hundred and twenty years ago. Imagine, if you can, that you are visiting the house of one of our ancestors in the village of Cambridge Farms, now Lexington.

Perhaps you are at the house of Jonathan Harrington, now standing facing the common on which stood the old meeting house and belfry. The clock had just struck one. Hark! What can that noise be? Who is galloping by the house? Listen! "Tip! The British are coming." Our neighbors are assembling on the common before the house. Bells are ringing and drums beating. Imagine the confusion in each home on that morning. Father and sons, seizing their muskets and powder horns, bid a hasty farewell to their wives and children, the last farewell for some, and rushed forth to the common, the common which was of our pass every day, thinking naught of the scene three years ago, little realizing that that little plot of green grass which we see covered with mounds of all sorts on our own nineteenth of April, on that famous morning was stained with the blood of our brave and noble ancestors. It is a privilege for but a few to live beneath the shading elms of Lexington, and yet some of us have that privilege, but do not appreciate it.

Let us return again to our visit. It is 2 o'clock now, and our brave men have come back to their homes. No sign of the British yet. There is peace for a few hours, but how short indeed! It is 3 o'clock on that bright April morning. The dew on the grass glitters and sparkles as the sunbeams scatter over it. The fearless farmers have assembled in the morning led by their father. They stop and listen. The tread of marching feet is heard. It grows nearer and nearer, when lo, the British appear under the road. The minute men form in line. The drums are beating, and a little fellow plays that old, old tune of "Yankee Doodle."

The British are now within six rods of the minute men. Major Pitcairn shouts, "Disperse, ye rebels, disperse. Do they obey? No! Then come those words from Captain Parker which have died not. Stand your ground. Don't fire unless fired upon, but if they mean to have war, let it be here." Hark! Some one has fired. It will never be known which side fired that first shot for others followed, and soon it was one mass of smoke. Eight of our men are lying in the grass, suffering pain and agony for the last time, while the British march on to Concord. The first blood for freedom has been shed. More is to follow. Massachusetts has rebelled. No longer can she be considered a colony of England. The dawn of freedom has come, and the events which follow are long and many.

After a chorus song, "The Vesper Bells," by the members of the school, Miss Mary L. Spencer read an original play of the "Hard Handed Craftsmen."

The speaker described in a very pleasing manner the scenes which occur daily at the entrances of and in the theatres of today, and painted in glowing words the gorgeous decorations, the richly decorated stages, and the people in attendance. In striking contrast to this was illustrated the playhouse of Shakespeare's time, with their rough structure, the jostling crowd, etc. She then announced that the play to be given was "The House of the Little Room." Put a carpenter's bench at one side, scatter the usual tools and shavings about on the floor, and we will add as stage furniture a bench or two.

In like manner, signs hung about the stage announced the change of scenes during each act.

The play itself, as rendered by the six young men of the class, was a decided

The town hall was richly decorated with the American flag, and streamers of red, white and blue were suspended from the center of the ceiling to the sides of the building. Flowers of beautiful structure and fragrance were thickly distributed about the stage, and the motto, "Nulla Vestigia Retrorsum," was prominently displayed in the background, while above was suspended a shield of arms with a border and the letters "H. S." in gold.

Rev. S. C. Bushnell, pastor of the Congregational church of Arlington, opened the exercises with prayer, and was followed with an address by the president of the class, Miss Margaret Champney. She said in part: "Teachers and friends assembled here, it is with the greatest pleasure that we, the class of 1901, most cordially welcome you all to our graduation. The interest which you have shown in our work has ever been a source of pleasure and help to us, and we hope that these exercises, for which our teachers have so kindly prepared us, may in some degree indicate to you what the opportunities of our school have done for us. For many years now parents and friends have watched us develop as individuals under the training of our teachers. So before we leave our school for new duties in life, you naturally wish to see the class as a whole. It is our earnest wish that this opportunity may afford you some pleasure and gratification." Miss Champney spoke of the breaking of the school ties and of the friendship and interest the graduates had had in each other in the past. A witty and interesting review of the class was treated upon the class meetings, the studies, rhetorical and socials being particularly mentioned. After paying a tender tribute to the teachers of the high school, Miss Champney closed by expressing the hope that with the splendid foundation for learning furnished by the town, the members of the class might achieve success in the future.

Following the rendering of a song, "The Night," by the school chorus, Miss Maude Evelyn Gott recited "The Retreat from Moscow." Her effort was finely delivered, being clearly and distinctly given.

Miss Harriet Calf Gott gave a resume of "The History Lesson," which scene were soon to be presented. After the singing of "Which is the Poorest Day to Sing?" by a semi-chorus, came the play. Scene I was "The History Lesson," with the following cast: The Eaglet, Francis, Duke of Reichstadt, by Miss Addie Wyman Fillebrown; Obeaus, professor of history, by Arthur Emery Freeman; Dietrichstein, an Austrian count, by Frederick Curtis Butterfield; Countess Camerata, disguised as a sister, by Elizabeth Gertrude McGrath; a conspirator, disguised as a tailor, by James Leo Duff. The leading parts in this scene were by Miss Fillebrown and A. E. Freeman, and could not have been improved upon. F. C. Butterfield, an Austrian count, good, while the other two performed the two lesser parts in a worthy manner.

The second scene, called "The Toy Soldiers," saw a change of cast. Miss Anna Grace Scannell took the part of the Eaglet, Miss Margaret Beatrice Murphy was Count Provesch, Miss Mabel Payne was a lackey, Flambeau in disguise, and F. C. Butterfield was Prince Metternich. In this scene also, the parts were carefully worked up, and the rounds of applause which followed showed their appreciation of the audience.

Miss Fillebrown resumed the role of the Eaglet in the third scene, which was the urging of the duke to escape to France. A. E. Freeman assumed the character of Flambeau, an Austrian count, a fitting climax to a fine presentation, and was notably dramatic. The entire production was given without the assistance of scenic or dress effects for the assistance of scenic or dress effects for the participants retained their graduating gowns, and this fact made the scenes exceedingly difficult to play and play well.

Two musical selections followed, after which came the class prophecy by Miss Helen Grant Robertson. If the audience were loud in their approval of what had occurred, they were particularly demonstrative during the reading of the prophecy. It was humorous from the beginning to the close, and while all of the hits were not recognized by the audience, they were by the members of the class, and everyone laughed to keep the graduates company. Many of the jokes were so plainly delineated that even strangers could see the points, and all of them were much enjoyed.

Miss Ida Helen Rogers gave two recitations, one in French, the other in English. Both were finely delivered, and the ## RAILROAD CHANGES.

MANY OF THE IMPORTANT LINES EX-CHANGING OFFICIALS.

Recent Advances of Prominent Railway Men Show Closer Consolidation of Systems—New Presidents
Have Come From the Bottom.

In at least three of the largest railroad offices of the United States important changes and transfers have just taken place. The railroads that have new heads are the New York Central, the Baltimore and Ohio and the Lake Shore. The retiring president of the Central, Samuel R.
Callaway, has become president of the American Locomotive company, the "locomotive trust." From the Lake Shore to the Central is the step taken by Mr.
William H. Newman, while the successor of John K. Cowen, resigned, as president of the Baltimore and Ohio, is Mr. Leonor Fresnel Loree. Mr. Loree held until his election to the presidency of the B. and
O. the position of fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania and general manager of the lines west of Pittsburgh.

These are only a few of the important changes in the personnel of the greater roads. In many of the smaller lines there have been shake ups, removals, resignations and transfers. For instance, Mr.
Newman's advancement made the vice president and general manager of the Pittsburg and Lake Erie railroad, Colonel J. N. Schoonmaker, the most discussed candidate for the presidency of that road.
The Pittsburg and Lake Erie is controlled by the Lake Shore, and the president of the one has always held a similar position with the other. Mr. Newman's removal to the Central changed this policy and left the office of president vacant. It is barely possible that Mr. Newman will continue to hold the presidency of both the New York Central and the Lake Shore. Should he, however, resign the latter position it is expected that Mr. W.
H. Conniff, now president of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis, will become head of the Lake Shore.

The Erie has lost by resignation its general passenger agent, Mr. Duncan I.
Roberts. His resignation is only the precursor of a number of important changes in that road, according to plans formulated by President Underwood. J. J. Turner, now general manager of the Vandalia system of Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, will, according to report, succeed
Mr. Loree as fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania and general manager of the lines west of Pittsburgh. It is also said that the Pennsylvania people have decided to take the Vandallia out of the receiver's hands in a short time.

These are only a few of the changes.
Others of equal importance have been made or are in contemplation. They are for the most part in line with the general policy of the great systems that is now

THE LOST GARDEN.

Somewhere in the distant southland
Blooms a garden—lost to me—
Warm with poppies burning fragrant,
Browny fires I may not see.

Subtle shadows flit and beckon
Down dim pathways bound with yew,
Where a white wraith wanders lonely
Twist the darkness and the dew.

In the ruined walls that echoed
Once to happy hearted moods
Now the stealthy lightfoot lizard
Unmolested rear their broods,
And beneath the oleanders
No clear voice sings as of old,
But the fleet carousing sunbeams
Whisper secrets to their mold.

Though I follow as the south wind
Fares his way through wood and plain,
Though I question hill and valley,
I shall never find again

My lost garden, where life buried
Joys that swift the glad hours sped;
Only one could bid me enter,
Only love, and love is dead!

TWO DEBTS AND A DINNER

The Story of a Girl Brought Up on the American Method.

M. Aristide Chapoulot, retired haberdasher, a widower with an only daughter, sat in his dining room and from time to time threw a glance of despair at the neatly laid table. He held the evening paper in his hands, but derived little information from it for the simple reason that he was holding it upside down. The glances which he cast at the table alternated with other glances bestowed on the old oak cuckoo clock ticking monotonously on the mantel. Now and then his glance fell on the steaming soup tureen, and then his eyes grew moist. The table was laid for two. Clearly M. Chapoulot was waiting for somebody.

Like Louis XIV, with whom he had no other point of resemblance, he hated to wait, especially for dinner. In business, punctuality had always been a fad with him, and now he made a point of eating his meals at 11 and 6 o'clock as regularly as he used to settle his accounts on the first of the month. And on this occasion he was unusually hungry, so the state of his feelings when the clock chirped half past 6 may be better imagined than described.

His eyes wandered from the spoons to the forks, from the forks to the knives, as if he were seeking an effective implement of self destruction. At this critical moment old Gertrude entered, muttering to herself. She was his cook and waitress, his daughter's maid and all the rest of the servants.

"Well?" she mumbled.
"Well, Gertrude," he sighed.
"Shall I take away the soup?"
"By no means, Gertrude. Charlotte will surely be here in a minute. It is very strange that she is not here now. When did she go out?"

"At 4 o'clock, as usual, for her piano lesson. An hour for the lesson, an hour to go and come, she should have been home at 6, as usual."

"And now it is 6:30!"
"Perhaps the omnibuses were full, or perhaps mademoiselle, as it is such a fine day, is walking home. And there are the milliners and the jewelers, you know, so many things to attract a young lady."

"Confound the milliners and jewelers, and the young lady, too, if she can't be on time! What can there be to see at dinner time, I should like to know?"

"To say nothing of the young men."
"Oh, I am quite easy on that score. Charlotte is able to take care of herself. She has been brought up on American lines, and I'm glad of it."

"Perhaps you'll be sorry. I don't know what bringing up on American lines means, but I don't like this fashion of young girls running about the streets alone."

But the unnatural father was not listening. He had formed a sudden resolution.

"Take away the soup and keep it warm," he said. "And bring me my boots. I will go to meet her."

The old woman, still grumbling, went off with the soup and had come back with the boots when the sound of the doorbell caused master and maid to exclaim in concert, "There she is!"

Gertrude dropped the boots on the floor and hurried to the door, and the next instant Charlotte entered like a young cyclone—a little face, all puckered with smiles, fluffy hair, 18 years, 32 teeth, slender figure, graceful carriage, diminutive feet and hands, shod and gloved to perfection, ribbons, flowers, etc.—in short, a typical butterfly of the boulevards.

"What! Home so soon?" her father exclaimed with fine irony as he seated himself at table and began to unfold his napkin.

"Oh, papa! I have something to tell you!"
"Dinner first, or you can tell your story as we eat. I shall understand it better. I've waited long enough already. Gertrude, the soup."

"Oh, but, papa, you don't know what has happened. I have had an adventure, a real adventure!"

"An adventure?" cried her father, starting from his chair, while Gertrude fung him, over the soup tureen, a glance of mingled reproof and triumph which clearly meant, "Didn't I tell you so?"

"Yes, papa, an adventure in the omnibus with a young man!"

"Good heavens!" groaned the horrified father, dropping his spoon and jumping up like a jack in the box. "An adventure? What do you mean?"

"This is your bringing up a la mairie something or other," muttered the old woman as she left the room.

"Oh, papa, he was a very nice, a very proper and correct young man, I assure you," replied Charlotte, all smiles.

"Let me inform you, young lady, that very nice, very proper and correct young men do not have adventures with young ladies—not in omnibuses, at any rate. Explain yourself!"

"It was a very simple thing, poppy. It really isn't worth looking so fierce or talking so loud about. I merely forgot my pocketbook. That happens every day, doesn't it?"

"H'm, yes; especially to people without pocketbooks. Go on."

"I did not miss it until the conductor held out his hand for my fare. What should I do or say? I might have been taken for a pauper, or even for a swindler. I turned red as a penny, and then I felt that I was turning white, by way of variety. Fortunately a very well dressed young man who sat beside me promptly handed the conductor a coin, saying, 'Two.' This kind young gentleman, seeing my embarrassment, had divined the true state of affairs and came to my assistance in this delicate and graceful manner."

"Well, mademoiselle, I am proud of you! Accept 6 sous from a strange young man! You might better have appealed to the conductor, to the driver, to the whole company. How are you going to repay those 6 sous? Or do you intend to preserve them as souvenirs?"

"Oh, he gave me his card, papa. Here it is—'M. Agenor Baluchot.'"

Papa snatched the card from her hand and roared:

"What, not satisfied with insolently lending you 6 sous in defiance of all the laws of polite society, this very nice and proper and correct young man gives you his card in the bargain! He is the most atrocious of ruffians; the vilest of scoundrels!"

"Dear me, papa, how could I return the money without knowing his address?"

M. Chapoulot, being unable to answer this ingenious argument in words, had recourse to action.

"It is fated that I shall not dine today," he exclaimed angrily. "Gertrude, go and call a cab. I will immediately pay this Agenor his 6 sous and also tell him a few plain truths."

"Oh, papa, papa! You surely won't. That would be very ungrateful. Remember that he rescued your daughter from an embarrassing situation!"

"With the intention of placing her in a more embarrassing one, no doubt. Silence, young woman! My memory does not need to be refreshed by a young idiot who forgets her pocketbook."

Gertrude having returned with the cab the irate parent went out, banging the door. Then Charlotte, all excitement and blushes, proceeded to tell the old servant that she knew much more of the nice young man than she had dared to confess to her father; that she had met him in the omnibus every evening for a month at least, and that she, without appearing to notice him, had soon noticed that he noticed her, etc.

"Here's a pretty how-de-do!" exclaimed the old woman, shaking her head and invoking silent maledictions on education a la whatever it was. Meanwhile Agenor Baluchot, in his bachelor apartments, was musing over his brief but pleasing adventure in the omnibus.

He was startled by a furious knocking at the door, upon opening which he was confronted by a stout gentleman very much out of breath, with a big cane grasped after the manner of a club and his hat cocked fiercely over his right eye.

"Monsieur," exclaimed the invader, "your conduct has been most immoral, unworthy of a French gentleman. No man of honor would thus take advantage of the innocence, the inexperience, the simplicity, the embarrassment of a respectable young woman. Profiting by the simultaneous absence of a father and a pocketbook you brutally forced 6 sous, and your infernal card upon an unprotected young lady. You thought it a good investment, no doubt, but it was a dishonorable action. Here are your 6 sous, monsieur. Neither my daughter nor I wish to have anything further to do with you."

While the infuriated visitor was concluding this speech his hands were diligently searching his pockets, but before the stupefied Agenor could utter a word a third actor appeared on the scene. This was the cab driver, who came in brandishing his whip and his tongue.

"You're a nice one, you are," he shouted. "I tell you I can only take you one way. You agree. You keep hurrying me up, and when you get here you skip and tell me to wait. Wait? Not much! I've been there before. Come! Pay up! Never mind the tip, but I want my 30 sous, and I want 'em quick."

All this was Greek to Agenor, but the stout gentleman, who by this time had turned all his pockets inside out, had become pale, then red, crimson, violet and was showing symptoms of turning green. Convinced at last that his search was useless, he feebly stammered, mopping his forehead with his gloves in his distraction:

"I have—forgotten—my—pocketbook."

"Of course," growled the cabman. "That's an old trick. It won't work with me. You can tell it to the police sergeant. You are a nice one, you are." And he was laying hands on the wretched M. Chapoulot, who, utterly overcome and apparently on the brink of apoplexy, offered no resistance when Agenor, who seemed destined to play the part of special providence to the whole family, interfered.

"With your permission," the young man politely said to Chapoulot as he banded the cabman his fare.

"Why, certainly, my dear sir, with pleasure," replied Chapoulot. "But not more than 5 sous for drink money, I beg you."

The mysterious workings of fate had brought it about that Charlotte's father, who had failed to understand how a sensible person could ever be without omnibus fare, was forced to admit that it is sometimes very convenient to meet a gentleman who will politely advance 35 sous and get rid of an implacable cabman. He turned with a gracious smile to Agenor and said:

Monsieur—M. Baluchot, I believe? Six sous to my daughter and 25 to me make 31 sous that I owe you. If you will do me the honor of dining with me this evening, I shall take pleasure in settling the little account at once. I am an old business man, and I hate to be in debt. Besides, you know, prompt payments make good friends."

A quarter of an hour later Gertrude laid another plate on the table. It is there yet; for within a month the banes were read for the marriage of Charlotte and Agenor.—Translated From the French For New York Commercial Advertiser.

An Ingenious Treatment by Which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Noxious Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that Drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Buffers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men. WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS! This remedy is in no sense a nostrum but a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of everybody a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 and $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. ## THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 23.

Text of the Lesson, Rev. xxi, 1-7, 22-27—Memory Verses, 3, 4, 27—Golden Text, Rev. xxi, 7—Commentary Prepared by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.]

1. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth." Compare Isa. lvi, 17; lxxvi, 22; II Pet. iii, 13, for in these passages also do we read of a new heaven and earth. The first two chapters in the Bible tell us of this earth and its atmosphere without sin, and the last two chapters in Revelation tell of the same. Our lesson today is concerning the great consummation when the Lord Jesus shall have subdued all things unto Himself and God shall be all in all (I Cor. xv, 28). The present heaven and earth is said to have passed away, but it will be the same earth changed and purified. Compare II Pet. iii, 5-7, and for a helpful analogy take II Cor. v, 17. The saying "no more sea" may refer to the great sea of Scripture, the Mediterranean, or if it means all oceans some people will be very glad, and all His people will be satisfied.

2. "And I, John, saw the Holy City, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Verses 9-21 give a full description of this great city, the Holy Jerusalem, the bride, the Lamb's wife, and if the language is figurative it is because words cannot tell the glory of that city; if the description is to be taken literally, it will be glorious enough to suit the most ambitious.

3. "Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them." Earth shall be a part of heaven, for there shall be no more curse (xxii, 3), and on this long sin cursed earth there shall never again be tears or death or sorrow or crying or pain. All old things shall truly be passed away. The devil, after his thousand years in the pit, shall have gone to the lake of fire forever (chapter xx, 7-10), and the last enemy, death, shall have been destroyed (I Cor. xv, 26). The whole earth shall be an Eden, and God as familiar with man on earth as with Adam and Eve in Eden. When the believer dies, he goes to be with God in His house, but on the new earth God will dwell with man in man's house, which God shall then have made all new.

4. "And He that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new." Salvation is of the Lord (Jonah ii, 9), whether of a nation or a man only (Job xxxiv, 29); He is the author and finisher. In the individual He begins the work, and He performs it until the day of Jesus Christ (Phil. i, 6). As He created all things, He will also re-create all things, for He is able. Let any should doubt the truth and reality of these things, the marriage of the Lamb, the coming of the kingdom, the new heaven and earth, He takes pains to say again and again that these sayings are of God and are true and faithful (xix, 9; xxi, 6). Many are longing to have all things made new in their lives, but cannot see how it is to be done. Let them remember these words of our God, "I make all things new." He who can make a new heaven and earth can make some new men and women.

5. "I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely." He who said on the cross, "It is finished," will again say, "It is done," and the full benefits of His great redemption shall fill the earth. The cry, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come!" has long been sounding, and with greater emphasis since John's Patmos visions. "Let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will let him take the water of life freely" (Isa. lv, 1; Rev. xxii, 17).

6. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be My son." If we would let God be our exceeding joy, He would so satisfy us that the world would lose its hold, and believing His exceeding great and precious promises, we would be filled with joy and peace and manifest the truth of His saying, so fully illustrated in Heb. xi, that faith overcometh the world (I John v, 4). See His call to us to let Him satisfy us in II Cor. vi, 14-15. The committee who prepare the lessons have said that this lesson may be used as a temperance lesson. Well, if the glories of the New Jerusalem will not draw men from intemperance, nor the horrors of verse 8 make them afraid, their case looks hopeless indeed.

22, 23. "The glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." No temple, and no need of sun or moon; the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are all and sufficient. If we could see the glory and the light of that city, we could not see much to attract us in the ordinary allurements of this world. He satisfies the longing soul and filleth the hungry soul, and it is possible even here in these mortal bodies to be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of His house and drink of the river of His pleasures; satisfied with favor and full with the blessing of the Lord (Ps. xxxvi, 8; Jer. xxxi, 14; Deut. xxxiii, 23).

24. "And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it." Now we have saved persons, but then, after Israel as a nation is saved, there shall be saved nations walking in the light of this great city. If Christians were now fully walking in the light according to their privilege, may we not believe that others, seeing that light, might want to walk in it too? In my mail today was a letter containing this request, "Pray that I may come into such oneness with Him that by the Christ within me my life may glorify Him and draw others to Him." Does your heart say amen to such a request? If so, see Ps. cxlv, 19.

25, 26. "They shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it." In Ps. lxxii, 11, we read that "all kings shall fall down before Him, all nations shall serve Him." In Isa. lx, 5, 11, we read of gates that shall never be shut and of the wealth of the nations being brought (verse 5, margin) for His Name's sake. We think of the men from the east who brought their gold and other gifts at His birth, and of Mary of Bethany, with her box of very precious and costly ointment, and we may well ask ourselves if we are bringing to Him in His service all that is most precious to us, or are we reserving somewhat?

27. "They which are written in the Lamb's book of life." Only such shall enter the city, but nothing or no one not cleansed by the blood of the Lamb can enter. See in Luke x, 20, what our Lord thinks of having one's name in the book of life. If we have life in Christ by His precious blood, our names are surely there, but not otherwise (I John v, 12).

THE HAPPIEST HEART.

The happiest heart is simple;

None dares to call it wise.

It sees the beauty of its life

With frank and truthful eyes.

It has a knack of loving;

It has a truthful way;

Oh, what a foolish heart is this,

The worldlier people say!

The happiest heart is childlike;

It never quite grows old;

It sees the sunset's splendor

Like the dawn's golden gold.

It has a gift for gladness;

Its dreams die not away;

Oh, what a foolish, happy heart,

The worldlier people say!

A KNIGHT ERRANT

How He Stood by an Innocent

Girl in the Hour of Her Peril.

As a matter of fact, Standish was not cold. He was indeed freshly and unexpectedly romantic under his apparent invincibility. Once, long ago in early manhood, he had seen for an instant ideal love as he had dreamed it. It had not been for him, and it had flown to fairer beauty, but he had never forgotten the revelation.

If now he sometimes looked over curiously at the girls and women he met, it was because he had always an irrational hope that that divine glimpse might again be vouchsafed to him. How did he know but that any day, in any drawing room, in the street, on the river, he might meet the lady of his dreams. He had always been disappointed hitherto. Never since

Mary Grayson died had he met love.

Women of all ages made much of him.

He was eligible as well as attractive and had gifts of mind as well as of person and manner.

So it was that he had drifted into being made much of by Mrs. Lawrence, the wife of Tom Lawrence, a good, honest, stupid fellow, one fair hair of whose head was worth all worthless little Mrs. Dolly.

Standish could hardly have explained how he had drifted into being always at Mrs. Dolly's beck and call and why he was to be found so often on the hearthrug at the Cedars when the Lawrences' butler brought in the afternoon tea. It was Mrs. Dolly's doing, no doubt, and Tom, who was head over ears in love with his heartless little wife, looked on Dolly's friendship with Herbert Standish contentedly.

Standish arrived one afternoon in April rather later than usual and found Mrs.

Lawrence very much put out at something or other. Even the lilies of the valley which he laid at her feet failed to dispel the cloud on her brow. For the first time Standish felt that Mrs. Dolly was inclined to impose a yoke upon him to which his broad shoulders did not bend gracefully.

While he was chafing a little at the lady's exactions the hopes of the house,

Guy, Cecil and Arthur, rioted into the room, followed more demurely by their sister, Millicent, a mimicking little girl, who, by and by, would be the image of her mother. It was a jest of Mrs. Dolly's that Standish was to marry Millicent one day, and even now, at 8 years old, Millicent, nursing her doll, made unsuspected eyes at the tall figure on the hearthrug.

Following came Nora O'Brien, Mrs.

Lawrence's new governess.

As the slender girl in the straight blue frock passed silently to her place behind the tea table Standish's heart gave a sudden, unexpected throb. With such a heart throb the lad of 18 had looked on the heaven destined beauty of Mary

Grayson, but never since, never since, had it beaten with such a high hope, with

WHAT IS SO RARE?

"And what is so rare as a day in June? Then, if ever, come perfect days; Then heaven tries the earth, if it be in tune,

And over it softly her warm ear lays." We shall never tire of writing of the country during these sweet June days, and we trust our readers will not tire in listening to us. It was on Sunday that we went far out into the country to hold converse with nature in her primal estate. We took, as we always do, the by-road that leads out from all human habitations, that we might be alone as much as possible with our attractive surroundings. The day was perfect. Not a cloud, save one here and there along the western horizon, was to be seen in all the sky, and the air, softened by the light of the declining day, came to us laden with the perfume and fragrance of the season. Our way on either side was overgrown with vine and bush which gave a delightful rural setting to the path that took us to the broad, open field and to the green pastures alongside the wood. At distances somewhat remote, we saw happy fathers and mothers with their happier children, gathering the daisy or making their way to the grateful shade of some majestic oak. We caught at frequent intervals the sweet notes of the whippoorwill, so in harmony with the coming on of the evening. Look whichever way we would, we saw God's world set to the music of earth and air and sky. Seated there alongside the wood, how we caught the myriad voices of nature! And they were all attuned for our listening ear. This beautiful world is ever ready to serve us with her choicest gifts, whenever we put ourselves in a receptive mood. We have but to put forth our hand to lay hold of God's limitless universe. The earth is not only for the lover of nature, but the heavens above are his also, with its countless stars and its immeasurable depths of azure blue. What infinite riches are ours if we will but receive them with grateful, appreciative hearts! Our frequent writings on nature and country life are chiefly for the purpose of inducing our young people and the older grown to come more immediately into the presence of the great, loving, pulsating heart of the world all about us. We often wonder how many of our Arlington people are letting go past them, all unnoticed, these golden sunsets of June. We wonder how many saw, that magnificent western sky on Monday evening. The Arlington heavens are delightful to behold on a clear, fair evening of the summer months. If you don't believe they are, just take your way up Massachusetts avenue on an evening until you come in full view of that unobstructed horizon and then behold for yourself the fading, yet brilliant glories of "departing day."

On our way home from that far away country walk, the setting sun illuminated with tints of the most delicate colorings the few floating clouds skirting the western horizon. How ecstatic such a scene! How uplifting and soul inspiring! O, that walk was to us a hymn of praise and the rendering of music set to harmony not "almost," but quite divine. Dear reader, do get out into the country and there receive the blessing and the benediction of all God's ministering angels.

ARLINGTON AHEAD.

Arlington is surely ahead of other towns in near vicinity to Boston in the modern architecture and convenience of her school buildings. We were especially impressed with this fact at the dedication, on Tuesday evening, of the Cutter school building. All Arlington has the right to feel proud of the interest taken by her people in educational matters. Our townsmen pay cheerfully for the education of the children. Our school buildings are abreast with the spirit of the times. Nothing is lacking in a material way for the attainment of the object of scholastic learning which is the object of all instruction. Now the question arises, as Mr. Hill, the secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education, so well put it on Tuesday evening "have our public schools of late years made such improvement in methods of instruction and in the subject matter taught, as to be in keeping with the improvement made in all school architecture and school equipment?" While Mr. Hill does not doubt that our schools are better taught than in former years, still he did not answer the question of his own asking. So we were left to infer that he does not believe that the school has fully kept pace with the school building.

Good old Dr. Lord, when president of Dartmouth college, used to say that it is possible to have large and modern church buildings with little religion, and then he would add, "It is possible to have elegant school buildings with little learning." We sometimes fear that we are counting too much on our school buildings and not enough upon our schools. Of this we are sure, however superior the schools of our day may be to those of the earlier years, there surely is not that difference existing between them as between the school buildings of these later times and those of a half century ago. We can well remember that out from a little district school in New Hampshire, there went at one and the same time seven of her pupils to Dartmouth college. One of those boys subsequently was a member of the Massachusetts house of representatives for three years, a member of her senate for four years, and afterward mayor of Boston. Another of those boys is one of the leading lawyers in New York city, and has held several important positions under the United States government. Another of the seven is one of the leading teachers in New York city. Two others are above the average in the ministry. Another, who was in the war of the Rebellion, became prominent at the New Hampshire bar, and in the politics of his state. The boys and girls who were taught fifty years ago in the ungraded district school somehow managed "to get there." In our estimation, we are overrating the importance or necessity of elegant and costly school structures, while we are not sufficiently emphasizing the natural methods that should invariably be employed in the instruction of the children.

Don't misunderstand us. We believe in good substantial school buildings, but they are not the school, and never can be. An earnest, live teacher with a pupil who is in downright earnest is bound to accomplish results independent, if need be, of the school building. Let us never mistake the husks for the full corn in the ear. The shell may do something in protecting life, but it can never beget it. The boy and his schoolmaster are in every way more important than the schoolhouse.

We are under obligations to Mr. George H. Bartlett for the invitation sent us to attend the graduation exercises of the Massachusetts Normal Art school, Thursday. We very much regret that we were not able to be present. President Bartlett has brought the Massachusetts Normal Art school to the very front in the world of art.

Governor Crane is right in his veto of the proposed subway. Schools closed Thursday for the summer vacation.

Mr. William D. Elwell is to be one of the ushers at the James-North wedding at Chifton on June 27.

Charles T. Clark, who was arraigned Saturday afternoon on the charge of receiving a liquor nuisance, was before Judge Ames in the third district Middlesex court, Saturday, and was found guilty and fined $100.

Rev. Dr. Watson will preach especially to graduates and students in the schools on Sunday morning. "The Thought-Life in the Formation of Character" will be the theme. All the young are especially welcome.

A picnic license was granted by the selectmen to the school on Wednesday evening. The principal business was the re-election of teachers. A new grade will be opened in the Russell, Cutter and Locke schools at the beginning of the fall term. This is the charge of receiving a liquor nuisance, was before Judge Ames in the third district Middlesex court, Saturday, and was found guilty and fined $100.

A very harmonious meeting of the school committee was held Wednesday evening. The principal business was the re-election of teachers. A new grade will be opened in the Russell, Cutter and Locke schools at the beginning of the fall term. This is the charge of receiving a liquor nuisance, was before Judge Ames in the third district Middlesex court, Saturday, and was found guilty and fined $100.

The pair of horses which have been doing service on chemical 1 at station house No. 2, were exchanged Tuesday for a fine pair of blacks. The old horses were not up to the requirements of the department and have been hard to handle. While it will require some time to train the new pair, it is believed they will be of much more value to the service than were the others.

The body of Daniel Sullivan, the farm hand for Wyman Bros. who was drowned in Spy pond, Thursday night, was recovered on Saturday evening by a diver. The body was about 100 feet from the shore near Wyman farm and was in an erect position. The man's feet were touching the bottom of the pond while his hands were closed on bunches of weeds with the death grip. The water was about 15 feet deep. The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of J. H. Hartwell & Son, where it was viewed by Medical Examiner Dr. W. D. Swan, of Cambridge. It was later removed to the home of Daniel Mahoney, of S. Wyman lane, where the deceased lived. It was buried from there Monday afternoon at Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Rice, 20 Pelham terrace, are to be congratulated on the safe arrival of a baby boy to their home, Wednesday morning.

The Arlington board of water commissioners were guests, Thursday, of the metropolitan water board at Clinton.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Moore and Mrs. C. W. Halsey went from Arlington, Tuesday, to attend the commencement exercises at the college grounds and lake.

Miss Annie Swasey and Philip Swasey, of Cornish, Me., have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Moore, of Broadway, this week. Miss Swasey graduates from Wellesley.

Tuesday, the ladies of the Woman's Relief corps go to Salem willows on a special car for a day's outing.

At a meeting of Court Pride, Foresters of America, held in K. of C. hall last evening, these officers were elected for the ensuing year: Daniel M. Hook, chief ranger; P. J. Melly, sub-chief ranger; James P. Daley, treasurer; W. R. Le Blanc, financial secretary; J. Hussey, recording secretary; T. E. Doherty, junior woodward; James Munroe, Jr., junior woodward; D. R. McDonald, senior beadle; J. Mahoney, junior beadle; John F. Connolly, J. Duffy, J. P. Dacey, trustees. A. Tilden, captain of the guard.

The newly organized baseball team, the Arlington A. A., played its first game Saturday with Winter Hill at Somerville, and won by a score of 23 to 8. Cook and Shean both did good work in the box and received good support. Wiley started in the game for the Winter Hill's, but was batted very hard, and was succeeded by Lewis. Monday morning the A. A. A. lost to the St. Charles team, of Woburn, in a ten inning game, by a score of 11 to 5. Shean was in the box for Arlington and pitched a good game, receiving raged support. Doherty and Young put up a good game for the visitors, while Berthrong, Doherty and Wiley were all for the home team. The batteries: Shean and Buckley for Arlington; Doherty and Young for Woburn. The umpire was Quinn.

The A. A. A. will play at West Somerville today with the Oakdale. The make-up of the team will be: Shean, p.; Freeman, c.; Buckley, 1 b.; Cook, 2 b.; L. Berthrong, 3 b.; O'Donnell, 3 b.; Daley, r.f.; Burns, c. f.; C. Berthrong, l. f.

Miss Annie M. Doherty, of Medford street, 46 years of age, died at her home, Tuesday morning, with a high mass of requiem at St. Agnes's church. Interment was at Woburn.

Street car men report 42,000 people as riding on the Arlington cars, Monday.

The first street cars to run over the loop line to Medford started off yesterday. It is expected the cars will be running on time today.

Miss Annabelle Parker gave a recital for her pupils, Wednesday afternoon, at her home on Russell terrace. The participating were: Marion Buttrick, John G. Hutchinson, Dorris Whitney, Florence Roden, Beatrice Frost, Bertie Dunlap, Pearl Wilkins, Alice Brooks, Marion Brooks, Grace McLean.

The first train to Newburyport, Wednesday, to compete in the muster there. They leave by special train at 6.30 a.m. Ladies will be accommodated.

Miss Emily G. Hartwell, operator at the Arlington telephone exchange, for nearly three years has been transferred to Winchester, where she has been appointed chief operator of the large exchange. The position is considered quite a plum, and the appointment is a genuine promotion. She will begin her new duties tomorrow. Miss Hartwell has five long friends here in addition to those of long acquaintance by her accommodating manner in which she performed her duties in the local office. Her many friends and associates wish her success.

Workmen are sheathing the ceiling of the police station.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

The decorations, Sunday, were very fine, including a mass of green about and back of the pulpit, with here and there flowers and potted plants, and birds hung from lighting fixtures. Music was by Mrs. Stevens, organist; Mrs. Sargent, soprano; Ernest Makechne, violinist; and W. Makechne, cellist. The primary department, under the direction of Mrs. F. B. Wadleigh, assisted by Miss Helen Kimball, had an important part, giving recitations, songs, etc. Rev. Mr. Slater made a brief address. At the close of the service each child was presented with a potted plant.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

The 83d anniversary of the Baptist Sunday school brought out a full house, Sunday afternoon. Superintendent Richardson, president, addressed the assembly, which was very pleasing in its variety and appropriateness. The musical numbers were numerous and rich, the rousing chorals of the school being a special feature. Miss Edith V. Browbridge rendered three violin solos with exquisite smoothness and expression. The quartet composed of Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Colman, Mr. Groves and Mrs. Hartwell has five selections. The children's parts were most welcome. One of the most impressive features of the service was a memorial exercise by the young ladies of Mrs. W. E. Richardson class, which was conducted with admirable taste, and with sorrowful affection for their departed teacher. Mr. Blake's statement in description of the contents of the old corner-stone was vivid and full, bringing out many striking contrasts between the days of 1850 and the present. The pastor's closing word was one of good hope, and of affection for his flock. The entire service was much enjoyed.

UNITARIAN CHURCH.

The Odd Fellows' services at the Unitarian church, Sunday, was of a highly interesting character. Rev. Frederic Gill addressed the members on "This earthly life of ours after death." W. W. Rawson also made a pleasing address. The music for the occasion was especially adapted for the hour, and was happily rendered. The children's services at the Unitarian church, Sunday morning, were particularly interesting. The pupils of the Sunday school recited selections, and sang several pieces. Rev. Mr. Gill addressed the school. One child was christened.

Rev. Mr. Gill speaks on Boston common, tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon.

ST. AGNES'S CHURCH.

Eighty children will receive first communion tomorrow morning at the 9 o'clock mass.

Rev. Fr. Mulcahy assisted at the confirmation service at the church of the Blessed Sacrament, of Jamaica Plain, Sunday.

Tomorrow two beautiful pieces of statuary will adorn the two side altars of the church. One is the madonna and child, and the other is St. Joseph. The former is by the sculptor J. Maguire, and will be placed on the altar given by him. The other is given by the Sunday school. The pieces came from Carrara, Italy, and are of Carrarian marble. The cost of each was $175.

BUNKER HILL DAY.

Monday was a much observed day in Arlington. Flags and bunting were displayed all about town from morning until night, the postoffices and stores closed early, and the day was given up to pleasure making. The small boy, mindful of the day, kept up a racket with horns, crackers and other noise incubators, until his neighbors almost wished Bunker Hill had been carried off by the British. Large numbers of people took occasion to make their initial trip on the elevated railway, or to visit Charlestown, and the cars were filled to their limit. Of course there were no sessions of the public schools, for who could study on such a day? Then there were the attractions at Spy pond in the forenoon, under the auspices of the Arlington Boat club. The boat races, which were the events: two ball games during the day on Lawrence field, golfers everywhere, lawn tennis and a score of other things indulged in by the respective champions. The Veteran firemen paraded the streets at 2 o'clock, dressed in their bright red uniforms, and were led by drum corps music. The day was perfect throughout, and the evening more so. And next comes the Fourth.

FAMILY REUNION.

The Durgin family had a large and enjoyable reunion Monday afternoon, with dinner at the Arlington Grand Army hall. There were 30 persons at the table, which were heaped high with good things, carefully prepared under the direction of the dining room company. The reunion was pleasantly spent in games and boating. Among those present were: Asa Durgin, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Durgin, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Durgin, and Howard Durgin, of Arlington; Mrs. H. B. Goodenough, Harold Goodenough, Miss Ethel Goodenough, Mrs. Lydia Gough, and Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Sleeper, and children, all of Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Kimball, Miss Mabel Kimball, Mr. and Mrs. J. Edwin Kimball, and children, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Halsey, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Halsey, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Moore and son, Mr. and Mrs. H. Kimball, Miss Helen Kimball, Miss Ella Kimball, Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Moore, Louis Moore and Miss Florence Moore, all of Arlington; Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan, Henry Sullivan and Miss Gertrude Sullivan, all of Brighton; and Miss Lillian Saville, of Medford.

CUTTER SCHOOL WINS.

The Arlington Cutter school nine defeated the Pleasant at Russell school park, Wednesday afternoon, by a score of 11 to 6. The players were: Cutter school, Banks, p.; Kelly, c.; McCarter, 1; Lowe, 2; Schwamb, ss.; L. Stengel, 3; W. Stengel, f.; Ford, c. f.; Stengel, r. f.; Pleasant's, Hicks, p.; Lunt, c.; Duffy, 1; Kidder, 2; A. Duffy, ss.; Hillard, 3; Roach, l. f.; Taylor, c. f.; Vects, r. f.

ARLINGTON GRADUATION.

latter was practically a farewell address. Next came singing by the chorus, and then the presentation of diplomas by William H. H. Tuttle, chairman of the Arlington school committee. He said, in opening, he would add nothing to mark the impression left by the graduates, and his remarks were brief, but aptly put. He urged all to remember there was nothing so good to possess as a thoroughly honest temperament, and wished all to remember the good instruction of the past. He expressed himself as well pleased with the work of the class, and mentioned the great importance of being able to speak, to write and to do well. It was not, however, the best and most proficient scholar who won the greatest applause and fame in life, and became "The race is not always to the swift." Those who are diligent and persistent in the pursuit of education, he said, will surely gain their place in the world.

The diplomas were then presented to each of the graduates and certificates were given to the special students. As each stepped forward to receive his scroll, a burst of applause was generously accorded.

The reception and dance followed. The only incident to mar the otherwise thoroughly enjoyable occasion was the absence of Miss Lillian Hill, who was confined to her home through illness.

RESUME OF L'AIGLON.

"England captured the eagle, and Austria the eagle's nest," wrote Victor Hugo in 1832 of the fallen emperor Napoleon and his longed for but disappointing son and heir. Most great men cast great shadows, and after this fact was never better illustrated than in the case of that renowned statesman and military genius, Napoleon Bonaparte. The very name brings to us visions of the crippled Prussian monarchy, of Austria's forced ceding in the frozen waters of Austerlitz, and of the complete annihilation of the Austrian army, brilliant and heartless victories of the Corsican general.

First coming into the scene of the French public as a young lieutenant, by dint of his iron will and perseverance he raised himself through the rank of general to the rank of emperor, until he became "king of kings." He was resolved to rule over an empire surrounded by a belt of dependent thrones, and for 12 long years victory followed victory in quick succession. His right star which gleamed before his eyes was still undimmed, and he walked hand in hand with victory until September, 1812, when came that disastrous retreat from Moscow which seemed so like a funeral march. For eight weeks the retreat continued through drifting snow and intense cold, while a soft, white mist made the grave of many a brave soldier. The general's influence over his soldiers and the love of the soldiers for him was never more forcibly shown than at Waterloo, the scene of Napoleon's final overthrow. After this battle, Napoleon fled to Paris, where, finding escape impossible, he gave himself up to the English authorities. He was taken to England, to the desert rocks of St. Helena.

Perhaps the one bright thought in that period of dreary darkness was that his son, Napoleon II, might soon rule even as his father had done. At this time the Eagle was but 10 years old, and springing as he did from an Austrian mother and a Corsican father, he was strangely enough with "the eye of iron" and "the glass." The existence of the Eagle, tragic in itself, is the theme of the play "L'Aiglon." It is filled with pathos, while music, breathing the soul of battle, strikes out heart-breaking sad notes.

The time covered by the play is that when L'Aiglon, whom the Austrians called the "Duke of Reichstadt," was a young man of 20 years. At the death of his father, he had been taken to the Austrian court, where his mother, Princess Marie Louise, had lived. A castle near Vienna was chosen for his home, where he was closely guarded day and night by a force of professional policemen who were well trained apies. In order to keep him young and effeminate, his father's glorious deeds were carefully hidden from him; he was given butterflies for amusement, had no friends of his own age save his cousin, the Countess Camerata, and he was made to feel the incapacity of the cruel ruler, thus thwarting him at every turn. All books which bordered upon Napoleon's greatness were forbidden in the library of the Duke, likewise every article of history, and in this way the duke was kept in ignorance of Parisian sentiment until the day Flambeau, to rouse his ambition, produced an article about Napoleon stamped with a likeness of Napoleon or his son. To foster this ignorance, the history instructor, Baron von Obenaus, took great care to forget the most interesting details of the emperor's life, and to endure the lies and treachery which he sees about him, the duke springs up and bursts forth into a perfect torrent of words.

The details of the conspiracy which was formed to secure the duke's escape were described by Miss Gott, and also many interesting scenes up to the time of the young man's death. Her play was particularly interesting, and fully explained the scenes which followed.

The graduates are: Frederic Curtis Buttrick, of Medford; Margaret W. LeDuff, Adelaide Wyman, Ellsbrown, Arthur Emery Freeman, Harriet Calf, Gott, Maude Evelyn Gott, Elizabeth Gertrude McGrath, Margaret Beatrice Murphy, Mabel Payne, Helen Gray Robertson, Ida Helen Rogers, Anna Grace Scannell, Dora Abbott Parsons, Philip Merrill Patterson, Lillian Newell, Alice Raymond Reed, and E. Foster Studley Wyman. The latter five are special students.

Thursday morning, at the high school building, the following pupils received prizes procured by the E. Nelson Blake, Jr., memorial fund: F. C. Butterfield, Miss Margaret Champney, Adelaide W. Ellsbrown, Miss Harriet C. Gott, Miss Elizabeth G. McGrath, Miss Margaret B. Murphy, Miss Mabel Payne, Miss Helen G. Robertson, Miss Ida H. Rogers, Miss Anna Grace Scannell, E. Nelson Blake was present and made an address.

ROSIE—CHALMERS.

The marriage of John D. Rosie, of this place, and Miss Jennima Chalmers took place at the home of the bride's parents on Tuesday evening, June 19. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. G. Marshall, pastor of the Congregational church of that place. The bride wore a gown of white crepe de Paris, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Eliza A. Chalmers, sister of the bride, wore white over pale blue. John Wiley, from New York, acted as best man. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The reception and dance followed. A large number of relatives and friends were present, and many handsome tokens given.

PAN-AMERICAN HINT.

Quick and Inexpensive Method.

The great Pan-American exposition has realized fully the expectations of the managers, while the great public is more than pleased with the artistic and inventive displays provided. The creative genius apparent in the architecture of the many buildings is "about equal, and the effects obtained throughout the marvelous color display are simply astounding. The landscape work has devolved the grounds into a perfect paradise. The exhibits are a clog and every superior in comparison are they to those of all other expositions. Buffalo as a city is a most delightful place, and excursions can be made in every direction to localities intensely interesting, but the greatest attraction save the exposition is Niagara Falls, which is truly one of the marvels of the world. The Boston & Maine railroad is every incentive possible for the benefit of the tourist to the city of New England. The rates are the lowest, the routes most numerous—line the most direct and its trains without question the best equipped in any from Boston. The General Passenger department of the Boston & Maine railroad, Boston, will upon application send you a Pan-American folder, which is replete in information of service and is yours for the asking.

"LOVE SEEKS HER OWN."

The marriage of the other morning of Captain William A. Harris to Mrs. Lucy Gould Whiting in Lexington after forty years' separation has about it a truth stranger than fiction.

Their youthful attachment, the engagement, the separation and the subsequent marriage after 40 years, only goes to prove again the happy saying, "Love ever seeks her own." So true to the eternal law, the ceremony was performed Sunday morning, and the happy pair may well sing the tune, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder."

USE OF WORDS.

The donation given the Lexington high school some time ago by Robert P. Clapp to encourage the extemporaneous use of written and oral English shows not only a liberality on the part of the donor, but also an appreciation of the needs in the schools today of a thorough training of the young in the art of speaking well and writing well. The success of many great men has arisen from a single speech, timely delivered and appropriate for the occasion, or by a written article touching aptly upon some important event, which struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the people. The recent contest in the high school in both written and oral work has proven the wisdom of the bequest to those who may have at first doubted its value, and the good work of the pupils shows their appreciation of the sentiment which prompted the gift.

North Lexington.

Albert Farmer has purchased 10 acres of land and the greenhouse property of Mr. Smith, the florist. Mr. Smith retains a part of his property, however.

Watering carts will soon be seen here. They will be running as soon as the standpipes are erected, and will be run from Lexington Center to the Milton Road place at North Lexington.

Rev. Henry H. Hamilton has recently had published a number of musical compositions upon which he has been at work for some time. Each of the pieces is with words, and is regarded as a very fine production. Among the choicest gems are: "How beautiful upon the mountains," "Homeland," "In the beginning was the word," "The earth is the Lord's," "O sing unto the Lord a new song," "If ye love me."

Stillman Kimball is slowly recovering from a threatened attack of pneumonia. The Baptist church Sunday school of Arlington Heights held a picnic at the Orchard Hill grove, Monday.

Charles Bacon, who has been ill with the grip for a long time, is now recovering rapidly.

Charles Smith, who has been making hay the past few days, had the misfortune to break his mowing machine, Thursday, and his work has been much delayed in consequence.

A big strawberry crop and large berries ready to pick are announced by growers here.

George S. Teague, who recently started doing a produce business, has added an expensive wagon to his outfit.

Mrs. C. B. Williams, of Ward street, died at her home, Sunday, aged 60 years. She has been in poor health for some time, and death was not unexpected. The funeral was Thursday afternoon, and was attended by Rev. Carlton A. Staples. A husband, three daughters and a son survive her. The daughters are Miss Alice Williams, of North Lexington, Miss Mary Williams, of Portland, Me., and Miss Fannie Williams, of North Lexington. The son is L. B. Williams, of Arlington.

LEXINGTON LOCALS.

About forty members of Simon W. Robinson lodge, F. & A. M., attended the services at Concord, Sunday, when the 10th anniversary of Corinthian lodge, of that place, was celebrated. The ride was made by special car, leaving Lexington at 1 o'clock, returning at 6.

Mr. W. B. Turner, son of the late city treasurer of Boston, has leased the W. W. Rowse place on Winthrop road for the summer, tomorrow.

The engagement is announced of Mrs. Emma Follansbee Goodwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Goodwin, to Mr. Edward C. Graves, of Boston and Beach Bluff.

Mr. W. P. F. Meserve and family, of Massachusetts avenue, left town last week for Brighton Beach, Coney Island, N. Y., where Mr. Meserve is associated with Mr. C. A. Linsley and Mr. Elmer Woodbury in the management of the Brighton Beach hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes Lockwood, of Massachusetts avenue, are now in Detroit, Mich., where they will spend some time.

The Woburn cars are now running. The first trip with passengers was Tuesday, the start being made at 3.45 p.m.

A number of the members of Simon W. Robinson lodge, F. & A. M., will attend the observance of St. John's day at Winchester, tomorrow.

Harry Woodbury and John McCarthy ran in a hundred yard dash, Monday morning, with J. A. Cowles as starter, and A. M. Fagin and H. P. Skipper as judges. The race was won by Woodbury in 10.54 seconds.

The Lexington high school defeated the Watertown high school at base-ball, Monday morning, by a score of 8 to 2. The game was played on the Parker Street grounds.

John McInerney, of Sheridan street, for the past two years a regular police officer, died Thursday, at his home, with heart failure. He contracted a severe cold in March while on duty in East Lexington, and never regained his health. Officer McInerney was a most trusted official, and previous to his appointment on the regular force he was a special. He was born in Concord, 44 years ago, and for several years followed farming for a living. Later, he was appointed driver for the horse cars in the employ of the West End street car line, which he was crossing tender at the Merriam street crossing in Lexington. Since his appointment on the force, he has been doing night duty. He leaves a widow and several young daughters. The funeral, which will be this morning at St. Bridget's church, will be attended by a number of the town officials.

Several members of the Historical society, gave an informal reception, Wednesday afternoon, at the Hancock-Clarke house, to Mrs. Charles M. Green, of Marlborough street, Boston, and Mrs. Jones. Both great granddaughters of Rev. Jonas Clarke. Both ladies expressed their pleasure at the manner in which this historic old house is preserved as an object lesson to succeeding generations.

Miss Lily E. Smith gave a most delightful entertainment at her home, 45 Oakland street, to the Shakespeare club and invited friends, Thursday evening. Selections were rendered from "The Tempest," arranged by Sir Arthur Sullivan for the piano, four hands; Mendelssohn's music to "Midsummer Night's Dream," including the nocturne and wedding march arranged for piano, cello and violin; and several vocal selections. The talent consisted of Miss Smith, Miss Coleman and Miss Piper, pianists; Miss Forsyth, violinist; Mr. Humphreys, cellist; and Mr. Hollings, baritone soloist. Miss Smith was warmly congratulated on the charming manner in which the program was selected and rendered.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. Mr. Bixby, of East Haverhill, preached Sunday morning and evening. He divided his sermon in the morning, and preached the first ten minutes to the children, on Abraham. The rest of the time was for the older people.

Christian Endeavor meeting was held Tuesday evening. Subject, "Reverence for Sacred Things." Edith Cox was leader.

The Sunday school will hold its annual picnic at Crescent beach, Revere, Thursday.

OLD BELFRY CLUB.

Dr. Bishop Osgood and Ellis Tower won the two cues, the prizes offered in the recent bottle pool tournament, which closed Saturday evening. They won by a small margin from Remond and Peabody, and C. A. Dale and E. S. Stevens. The dance at the clubhouse, Monday evening, was attended by a fair-sized company, who had an enjoyable time. Refreshments were served.

East Lexington.

While attempting to trim the limb of a tree near the Lexington Inn, Monday morning, George F. Harrington, of Pleasant street, laid on a ladder, and as he was standing, and struck the ground 20 feet below. He was so seriously injured that he was taken to the Massachusetts General hospital, where it was found that he had suffered from a broken back. A telephone despatch last evening announced that the back was not broken, and that the injured man was in fair way to recovery. Harrington is about 27 years of age.

Rev. L. D. Cochrane will preach Sunday morning on "God's need of men."

Mrs. M. A. Page is sick with the measles.

Alfred Pierce has moved to Lexington Centre.

GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

The graduation of the members of the Lexington grammar schools, Thursday afternoon in the town hall were well attended. There were a number of recitations and songs by the members of the school, which were all finely rendered. Rev. Mr. Cochrane offered prayer at the opening and close of the exercises. ## LEXINGTON GRADUATION.

success. The parts were assigned to perfection, and their interpretation of the study characters showed a thorough understanding of the author. The players were dressed in the costume of actors in the days of Shakespeare, and it was so perfectly imitated that it was difficult to play as originally staged, was not being produced. Jason Sanford made a complete manager of the comedy, representing Peter Quince, a carpenter. Allen Smith was Nick Bottom, a weaver who was supposed to take the part of Pyramus. His imitation of the acting of a weaver in the role of a hero would be hard to improve upon, while the other players were as good as Flute, a bellows mender, made a perfect Thais, appearing in the third scene as a young lady. He took the part so well that the story of the play not announced him to be a man in disguise, he would most certainly have passed as a very pretty girl. Vernon Smith was supposed to be Tom Snout, a tinker, who played the "hard" part of a stone wall. He had two bits of stone hung about his neck, and his fingers formed a crevice in the wall for the hero and heroine to speak well as it was the case at each other. Clifford Pierce was Robert Starveling, a tailor, who played his part to perfection. Charles Johnson, as Snug, the joiner, appeared in the third scene as a horse. He wore a good saddle and his growls were sufficient to terrify the actors, if not the audience. The play was a decided novelty for a graduation, and was highly appreciated by all.

"O, For the Wings of a Dove" was a solo finely rendered by Miss Grace E. Robinson, assisted by the school chorus.

Ellen C. Locke then read an essay written by Miss Margaret Wiswell, entitled "The Causes of the Revolution."

THE CAUSES OF THE REVOLUTION.

During the years which occurred between the overthrow of the Stuarts and Wolfe's victory at Quebec, the relations between Great Britain and the American colonies were of a most peculiar character. In view of the threatening attitude of France, it was manifestly unwise for the English to irritate their colonies, or in any way weaken their loyalty. Accordingly the Americans were disturbed by a little, although they were not treated with any great liberality, for such was not the way of governments then any more than it is now.

Since 1675 the Lords of Trade had the general supervision of colonies, and many were the complaints poured into their ears by the royal governors concerning the conduct of the colonies. Such advances as these, reported year after year and greatly exaggerated in their telling, went far in England toward creating an opinion that the Americans were greedy and of a stronger government. One of their most cherished plans was to bring about a union of all the colonies under a single ruler, such a union as would afterward formed for herself, but one evolved as far as possible from the local self-government.

The first attempt to establish a permanent union of the thirteen colonies was made by Franklin during the session of the Albany convention, but the people were not ready for it at that time, so it was not carried out. In 1764 Lord Grenville introduced in the House of Commons a resolution announcing the intention of the government to raise a revenue in America by requiring stamps on all legal documents, this resolution to be put into effect at the end of one year. All the colonists took the position that as freeborn Englishmen they could not be taxed by a body that they did not represent in that body. They added, however, that if they received a letter written by the king's name, asking them to contribute a sum of money for the needs of the empire, they would cheerfully grant liberal amounts as a token of their loyalty and interest in the welfare of the empire.

At the time of the North American colonies were in a state of rebellion, and the year of 1765 the act was passed, but it caused such outbursts of feeling among the Americans and Whigs that it was repealed shortly after it went into effect. Pitt and Conway were the two ministers to whom this was due, and they were vilified with delight throughout London, which had been strongly opposed to the tax.

After this had been repealed the feeling between England and her colonies was very friendly, but the tyranny of George III. and the Townshend acts soon roused such a disturbance that in 1768 troops were sent over to Boston. The people met them with hostility, and were always angry or quarreling with some of them, so that when on the fifth of March, 1770, a sentinel knocked down a small boy in the street, the angry citizens quickly collected and began to pelt the soldier with snowballs, and make abusive epithets. Captain Preston and seven privates appeared and shot at the mob, killing five, and wounding six. The affair of the East India company was in a very bad state, and we decided to make them a very poor grade cheaper in America than that which the colonists were accustomed to smuggle in from Holland. Accordingly three ships laden with tea sailed for Boston, but were not permitted to land their goods.

Adams called several meetings in the Old South church, and Rotch, the captain of the ships, Adams, and the other back to England. By the laws of Massachusetts every ship had to unload within twenty days or be seized by the revenue, and this was the case with the tea ships. Adams called a meeting and cleared papers before it left the harbor. The nineteenth day came, the ships were still loaded and the governor refused to give the necessary papers, so Adams took matters into his own hands, and at midnight 50 men, dressed in the garb of Mohawk Indians, went to the ship and poured 350 chests of tea into the harbor. The British government was off for Philadelphia to spread the glorious news that Boston had at last thrown down the gauntlet for George III. to pick up.

When the news of the Boston Tea party reached England, wonder and dissatisfaction were widespread. Lord North quite naturally pronounced this affair a fitting culmination to years of riot and lawlessness, and just what might be expected from their wretched old town meetings.

By special request of George, parliament gave authority to the British government to pass the Boston Port bill, which prevented all intercourse or commerce in the harbor until the rebellious town had paid the East India company for the tea. The tea and shown a proper spirit; the second bill annulled the charter of Massachusetts and wholly destroyed the free government of the colony. Perhaps the most fatal mistake of the English in taking these measures was the opinion that Massachusetts would not be supported by the other colonies, but when the charter was annulled the other colonies felt they were in danger of losing their rights also, so that they all considered the town of Boston suffering in the common cause, and did their utmost to show the afflicted city that they sympathized with her and would do all in their power to assist her.

When Massachusetts learned of the sentence passed upon her, she felt that she was called, and at the decisive moment she was locked while Adams moved that they invite the other colonies to send delegates to a congress, which would meet at Philadelphia. The delegates were to discuss and provide for the best means of defending themselves against their foes. While this congress was in session, the war really began at Lexington and Concord, and continued until the decisive victory at Yorktown.

The presentation of diplomas was by Prof. Charles H. Wiswell, of Lexington, chairman of the school committee, and a teacher in the Noble and Greenough's private school, in Boston. Mr. Wiswell congratulated the graduates upon their past successes, and gave them advice for the future. His remarks were brief and to the point, making the presentation scene an impressive one. After the singing of "The Voyagers" by the school, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Staples. The graduates were: Corinae Locke, Reina Gladys Vickery, Margaret Wiswell. The graduates were: Corinae Locke, Reina Gladys Vickery, Margaret Wiswell. The graduates were: Corinae Locke, Reina Gladys Vickery, Margaret Wiswell.

Latin course—Charles Perrin Johnson, 100 Ames Bldg., Boston, June 13, 1901.

Amy Prescott Morse, Clifford Wellington Pierce, Grace Elizabeth Robinson, Allen Copeland Smith, Mary Louise Spencer, Nina May Steele. English course—Chester Myron Lawrence, Jason Leeman Sanford, Vernon Wiswell Smith.

A reception and dance was given to the graduates, Thursday evening, at the town hall. There was a large attendance.

Prizes were awarded Monday at the Lexington high school for excellence in the extemporaneous use of written English and in oral language, under the conditions named by Robert P. Clapp, who last year placed a sum of money in trust for the purpose. Miss Gladys Vickery was an easy winner in the use of written English, although the work of Miss Margaret Wiswell was excellent and was given special mention. Miss Nina M. Steele and Allen C. Smith were so evenly matched in the use of oral language that the contestants were informed that either the two leaders must compete over or the prize would be divided. The contestants voted unanimously, without knowing who were the two selected to divide the prize. The judges were Robert P. Clapp, Dr. M. P. Merriam and Roscoe Ham.

The prizes were open to the two upper classes, but the senior class won all the honors. Each of the contestants, eight in number, was given a subject to speak upon just before they were called to speak, and the exercise was of course purely extemporaneous. The judges pronounced it to be of a high order. The written work consisted of two articles by each of the two contestants, one subject being Shakespeare's "As You Like It," and the other, any even during the Revolutionary period. Miss Vickery wrote on "The Battle of Lexington," and Miss Wiswell on "The Causes of the Revolution." This is the first year in which the pupils have had a knowledge of the approaching contest, for the prizes were offered last year for the first time. Mr. Clapp, the donor of the prizes, believes fully in the importance of both oral and written English, and is much pleased with the interest which has been manifested in the contest. The amount of money which is awarded by the school each year from the donation enables each prize winner to receive $12 worth of books.

loves so well. And when at the al-tar I have made Her one lit-tle lass a-lone. For the fair-est of all is the heart and her hand my own. Although wed-ded to me she will girl I call My sweet-heart, Ei-ly Ma-lone.

al-ways be My sweet-heart, Ei-ly Ma-lone.
CHORUS.
Ei-ly! how shy-ly Her dark eyes shine. When I say to her, "Ei-ly, Will you be mine?" Gen-tly my arms en-fold her, My lips to hers I press. Close to my heart I hold her When she soft-ly whis-pers, "Yes." "Yes."

STORY OF KANSAS.

No. 4.

By Dr. W. O. Perkins.

CLIMATE AND HEALTH.

The climate of Kansas is salubrious and vivifying, especially in the western part of the state, which might be converted into a grand sanitarium for the cure of those afflicted with throat and lung troubles, liver and skin diseases, and many others. Medical science teaches that diseases are due to bacteria which thrive and grow fast in a climate where miasma abounds, but fail to generate, or grow feeble and die in an atmosphere charged with an abundance of pure oxygen. In western Kansas, the microbe is short-lived, if he is fortunate enough to get a start, and if he emigrates here from an eastern malarial location, he becomes debilitated, finds life a burden, and is hurried to an untimely grave. A writer on Kansas says: "When a man arrives here from the malarial districts of the East, he is full of microbes that a neglected dog is full of. He is overcome with lassitude. His liver is on a strike. His gall receptacle has overflowed, mingled its contents with the currents of his blood, and changed his complexion to saffron. He is listless, despondent, and without appetite. He dislikes exertion, and takes a chill for involuntary exercise. The beneficial effect of the climate of Kansas on that man is marked and immediate. In a month his complexion is cleared; his internal economy is in working order; his appetite is ravenous; restless nights are a thing of the past; he sleeps like a policeman, and wakes to find life a poem of new health and joy."

The purity of the atmosphere of western Kansas is shown by the fact that meat will keep fresh for weeks without salt or other preservative, and that ripe fruit seldom, or never, decays, but dries. Such a climate tends to superior mental and physical development, to health and longevity.

There are few regions where man's existence is so little beset with the evils of disease and degeneration as in the western part of Kansas. The cool, light, thousand square miles lying on the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains—Kansas. Why is this? Every sanitary and hygienic requirement essential to the building up of a good constitution and the preservation of health is here met by natural physical conditions. Situated in the center of the continent, far from the coast, and about midway of the north temperate zone, it slopes gradually to the east, from an altitude of 4,000 to 5,000 feet.

The atmospheric disturbances, while sometimes vigorous enough to cause a little temporary inconvenience, purify the air, prevent the sultry, oppressive and stagnant condition found in many other localities, and ensure a pure, ex-acting and health-giving element for breathing. The broad, rolling prairies, gradually rising elevations or divides, the numberless water-ways, all tending toward the "Father of Waters," make Kansas a perfect health-giving locality. There are no stagnant disease-producing pools, no malarial-breeding marshes. The height of the Cumberland plateau, in Tennessee, is only 1,000 feet above the miasmic bottom of the Tennessee river, and 1800 feet above sea level, which is much less than the average of the western half of Kansas. The former is a famous resort for invalids; the latter is a health-giving locality. The latter is similar to western Colorado, in soil and climate. A physician, familiar with this region, says: "It is free from malaria, with an atmosphere peculiarly adapted to the cure of consumption, asthma and bronchitis; it not only stimulates the nerve centers, invigorating the body, giving greater volition and physical power, but stimulates to the mind, cheerfulness, sociability and thought."

Pure air and sunshine are the great health-giving agents; and they are abundant in Kansas. The cool nights often bring refreshing showers, and the days are always fanned by the prairie breezes. No land has more wondrous days and nights, more beautiful, or richer in health-giving qualities. The geographical, geological and meteorological facts testify to the healthfulness of Kansas.

The rate of child mortality is very low. Hundreds and thousands of once weak-lunged persons have reaped the benefit of this elixir-of-life climate.

Another reason for the healthfulness of Kansas is the excellent sanitary measures everywhere in operation. The civil authorities early paid close attention to this matter. Out of one hundred and five counties, one hundred have organized boards of health. The five without a health board are sparsely populated. The law is very strict. Every case of contagious and infectious disease, including typhoid fever, and diphtheria, must be reported to the board of health. Failure to report carries a heavy penalty. Cities have municipal boards of health, which enforce the sanitary laws and ensure healthful conditions.

The Rev. President of Bethany college (who should tell the truth) in giving some reasons why people should come to Kansas, says: "Sickness is far less prevalent than in the East. Hundreds suffering from lung and throat diseases, rheumatism, indigestion and general debility, have recovered and joined in the great chorus. There is no want of health here. People live to be very old in this climate. I remember a half-century old couple in Lindsborg, the man 89, the woman 81. Near by are two men 81 at the next door a grandpa of 80, and across the street two women 80. People are young at 75. Our climate does it. Children are, as a rule, taller and stronger than their parents. Here is a family of five boys, ranging from six feet to six feet four inches in height. A neighbor has two boys, six feet three inches each. No degeneration of the race here. The climate does it." Last evening I was at a house where there was a large party of young people, and I observed that they were taller than their parents, whom I have seen. There were eight nationalities represented, but not a single one of foreign accent or manner was discernible. Their parents were all emigrants, but the children are thoroughly Americanized.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the membranes that the makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE" and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently, and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD IN THE HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

Send prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. B 680 EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

INSTRUCTIONS.

- Before giving an alarm be sure a fire exists.
- Give the alarm at the nearest box.
- Pull the hook way down, only once, and let go.
- Never give an alarm for a fire seen at a distance.
- Wait at the box, if possible, and direct the firemen to the fire.
- Never give a second alarm for the same fire; all second alarms are given by the engineers or other persons in authority.
- Never give an alarm for a brush fire unless buildings are in danger; but inform the engineers and they will take action to extinguish it.
- Citizens are requested to inform themselves as to the location of keys. Signs over the boxes will give the necessary information.

CAUTION TO PERSONS HAVING KEYS.

Never open boxes except to give an alarm.

You cannot remove your key until an engineer releases it, and it will then be returned to you.

Never allow the key out of your possession except to some responsible party, for the purpose of giving an alarm, and then see that it is returned.

If you remove from your place of residence or business, return the key to the chief engineer.

CARNEGIE'S PROTEGEE.

Millionaire Philanthropist Paying For the Training of Her Voice.

One of the most fortunate and happy girls of America today is Miss Annie Dobbie, an 18-year-old maiden of Brooklyn. Miss Dobbie is fortunate, for she is the possessor of one of the best soprano voices of America, and she is happy because she has a splendid opportunity of cultivating it. The man who has made it possible for Miss Dobbie to realize her greatest dream of happiness is Andrew Carnegie, the Scottish-American millionaire and philanthropist.

Since early childhood Annie Dobbie has known that she was the possessor of voice of wonderful sweetness. Before she could lip intelligibly she hummed and trilled little snatches of song that she learned from her mother. Unfortunately for the development of her musical talent, however, the Dobbies are poor.

MISS ANNIE DOBBIE.

And Annie's voice has not been trained as it should be. Her musical tastes have been gratified to some extent, however, by the hearing of concerts given by the most celebrated of singers. Tickets to the concerts have been sent to Miss Dobbie and her mother by a friend.

About three years ago it was Annie's good fortune to hear Mme. Emma Nevada read some of her most beautiful songs. After the concert Annie had a wonderful idea. She, the poor 15-year-old girl, possessing little but her voice, would go to the great soprano and ask her to judge and criticize the voice. The great and wealthy singer went to the poor little maiden and her mother. They were received, and to Annie's intense gratification, Mme. Nevada recognized her as her most enthusiastic auditor on the day before. Mme. Nevada was graciously pleased to hear the test of Annie's voice and was most agreeably surprised at its sweetness and strength.

Nevada's letter of commendation of Annie Dobbie's voice reads: "Annie Dobbie has one of the most beautiful voices that I have ever heard. She is musical and gives promise of becoming a first class singer. She needs and is worthy of a great master. Her voice has a personal timbre of exceptional beauty. I earnestly hope she may find the means of continuing her studies."

Encouraged by the favorable opinion of her daughter's voice, Mrs. Dobbie redoubled her efforts to have it properly trained. She is a Scotchwoman, and he thoughts turned to Andrew Carnegie, her countryman. A letter of appeal elicited no response, and then Mrs. Dobbie applied to Mrs. Carnegie. The latter considered the matter, read the favorable references to Annie's voice, and the thing was done. Mrs. Carnegie interested her husband in the case, and as a result Annie is enjoying the best musical culture that America affords.

VISITING ENGLISH EDITOR.

Young Pearson, Now Here, Is a Publishing Trust in Himself.

Another Englishman is here to go points on how the Yankees do things. This time it is Cyril Arthur Pearson publisher. It is to be feared, however, that we will not be able to teach Mr. Pearson much about his own business for he is one of the most enterprising active and successful young men of the British empire.

Mr. Pearson is principal proprietor manager and editor of Pearson's Weekly. Pearson's Magazine, Mainly About People and a great many other periodicals. He is, in fact, a sort of publishing trust in himself. And he is only 33 years old. It is scarcely necessary to add that while

CYRIL ARTHUR PEARSON.

Mr. Pearson has been accumulating experience in publishing he has also acquired much cash. His fortune is estimated at some millions of pounds.

Starting in life as the son of a poor clergyman, Mr. Pearson first obtained an education at the great public school of Winchester. After two years at home he joined the staff of Tit-Bits, England's well known green covered weekly. Soon Mr. Pearson's energy made him manager of Tit-Bits. For four years he occupied that position and then left it to start a similar publication, which he called Pearson's Weekly. Pearson's has a pink cover. It succeeded so well that he has started and made successes of about 90 other papers, including a London daily.

BEFORE NIGHT.

It is the hour when faints the long gold day,
That hour when all the spent world sighs to rest.
The low wind sleeps, the lilies idly sway,
And drops the bee into the rose's breast.

Now the last weary swallow wheels on high,
A flash of silver on the rosy light;
Soon the first star shall gleam in the still sky
And earth be clasped by the cool arms of night.

Now the round notes of restless birds are dead,
Peace on the scented land and shimmering sea;
Now sorrow fades as fades the sunset red,
And with the tender night comes peace to me!

—Eleanor Norton in Harper's Magazine.

A FEARFUL ...ORDEAL.

The Story of a Pursuit and How It Ended.

BY A. C. SALISBURY.

The day was hot and dusty. The sun beat down unceasingly over the burning pavements. Beads of perspiration stood out upon the faces of aldermanic looking men as they jostled each other in the streets, and the women looked weak and wilted. The very horses hung their heads as they stumbled along with their heavy loads.

It was in the great city of the "world's fair," and I was then a modest little woman in a literary way on one of the big newspapers. The excitement attendant upon the work fascinated me, and as I had always led a rollicking, jolly, bohemian life I was in my element.

I had wandered about aimlessly for a greater part of the forenoon, finding nothing of interest, when I was summoned back to the office by a fellow reporter whom I met on the street.

I was beginning to lose my temper. Everything had gone wrong that day. I had awakened with a severe headache, and the intense heat had aggravated it to such an extent that my brain seemed to be on fire. I had missed seeing Jack in the morning. Jack was my sweetheart, and he was going away that day to be gone ever so long. I knew he was obliged by business interests to leave at any cost, and so I carried with me the consciousness that he had left without saying goodby and that it was the first time in the five years that I had known him.

Musing in this unpleasant way, I swung open the portals of the great gray doors with much more energy than a small woman should exhibit to find the editor, notwithstanding all the heat, looking as fresh and happy as the cool violets that used to blossom under the spreading branches in the old home of which I sometimes dreamed.

It was refreshing, truly, and when he detailed me to do a bit of work that took me out into a country town my restlessness vanished and I became once more my happy self.

I walked down to the station with lighter step, and armed with a tablet and other articles of journalistic warfare I ensconced myself on the shady side of the car and relapsed into a state of delightful semiconsciousness.

How long I remained thus I do not know, but I gradually became aware, with that indefinable instinct which one sometimes becomes possessed, that I was the object of a steady gaze. I raised my eyes, and as I did so an irresistible impulse impelled me to look across the aisle. A man was looking at me intently, and his eyes possessed a peculiar glitter that I had never seen in human eyes before. As my glance met his he seemed about to rise and come to me. I tried to break the spell. I could not until after what seemed to me ages the train shot under the bridge, and the darkness immediately surrounding closed out those balls of fire with their red flashes.

A thousand thoughts flashed over me, and when the darkness cleared away and I was once more in the daylight, by a mighty effort and without venturing another glance, I took a seat in a different part of the car and reversed the cushion.

In vain I tried to shake off the impression. It was stronger than I. So I gave up trying and endeavored to reason away my fears. What had I to do with fear? Was it like me to be afraid? Where was the courage necessary for future undertakings if I could be so distressed by a single pair of eyes in broad daylight?

Reasoning thus I reached my station and ordered a rapid drive to my destination. Out of the car and away I felt better. I tried to think it was all a piece of folly, but I could not forget those terrible eyes, and I remember with what actual dread I looked into the face of the first person with whom I talked.

As time passed I began to feel more myself, and as I dined just preparatory to my return I had shaken the feeling from me and could laugh at what I was pleased to term the fancies of a brain overtaken and heated.

It was late when I arrived in E., and after a stay of four or five hours it was just gathering dusk.

I reached the depot and heard in the distance the roar and rumble of the approaching homeward bound train a tremor seized me for which I could not account. It brought back the scenes of the day, but determining not to let this silly weakness get the better of me, immediately on entering the car I turned resolutely to my freshly cut magazine and soon became interested in it. I read until I grew tired and until the flickering lights in the car threw dancing shadows on my book, when I turned my face wearily and looked out of the car window.

The heated day had merged into a cool night with signs of a storm in the heavens. The moon was out silvery white, banked by dark clouds, while a low, rambling farmhouse stood silhouetted against the plains.

The train shot on. Station after station was passed until we were almost home again. I had grown drowsy and, throwing my heavy traveling wrap about me, I rested against the cushions. Suddenly I raised my head and looked around the car. I cannot describe the force that compelled me, but I am quite sure that had my life been weighed in the balance against my inclinations I could not have done otherwise. I saw the same terrible eyes fastened upon me with that awful glitter, and they expressed more than mortal tongue could have done—hatred, revenge, cruelty, fendishness.

I grew sick at heart. I could understand now the fear that must possess the poor little animal the prey of the larger. My limbs trembled. My head reeled. My teeth chattered like castanets, and it seemed to me that the beating of my heart could be heard all over the car, above the roar and din of the rattling train. A desperate thought flashed through my mind. I would speak to the conductor and ask his protection, or that fatherly looking gentleman in the corner who resembled a physician. But what should I say? Tell him I was afraid of a man on the train who was looking at me? Go to the fatherly looking old gentleman with a blanched face and trembling limbs and beg him to protect me from some one who had done nothing to molest me? What would they say, or, saying nothing, what might they think? My mind was a chaos of conflicting emotions.

I looked around the car. Evidently the occupants did not notice my agitation—those who were awake; a great many were in various stages of repose, and I can remember the half frantic thought that came to me, imagining how they would wake from their slumber in wild affright should I do what I was most sorely tempted to do—lose my control and give voice to my nervousness in a truly feminine shriek.

When the train steamed into the depot, I made my way rapidly through the car to the outward entrance. It was very dark. The wind blew a gale, and the air had grown chill. I hastened rapidly through the depot without encountering a familiar face and picked my way over the pavements under the gaslight.

There was neither a cab nor a car in sight, and after some little deliberation I decided not to wait. Gathering my skirts about me I disappeared down a dark street. There was always a policeman on that corner, I knew, and I could appeal to him. I had been out many times before at night without experiencing any alarm, but now I was timid, and I looked in vain for the policeman's familiar form. The very lampposts seemed to stretch out spectral arms that were mocking my fear, and the massive buildings on either side of the street looked grim and forbidding.

It might have been a city of the dead, everything was so silent—not a soul in sight. The gaslights had grown dim. I looked about me nervously and recognized with horror a form that had grown to me terribly familiar. I threw self control to the winds and started to run. There were only two blocks more, and I felt sure I could reach the end of the way.

On, on, I sped, my heart beating with such rapidity that it almost suffocated me. One block more and I would be safe. With a courage born of desperation, I made the final effort. I looked around. The form was gaining upon me rapidly. Would I ever reach it? At last my foot was on the step and I clutched the palustrade. Just at that moment I felt a clutch upon my shoulder. My head was bent backward by the contact. I felt a hot breath upon my face. A hand clutched me with a grasp of iron, and my face was uplifted to another, held there by some terrible magnetism. I closed my eyes resolutely. At that moment I was stronger than I had ever been. I thought of my mother and the dear friends who had all been so good to me. My time had come, and I was going.

I felt the keen edge of a knife as it cut into the flesh. I can remember how it felt—that it did not cause me great pain—and then I knew no more.

I was in my own room, and my sister Lilla was bending over me. I had had a terrible struggle with death, and I had a serious wound. They told me all about it when I grew strong again. He was Professor Joseph, a hypnotist, whose wife, a little lady resembling me greatly, became insane and was confined in an asylum. The shock was so great that it had eventually unsettled his reason, and he was constantly pursued by the fear that she was trying to murder him. He had met me, of course, accidentally, and the resemblance that I bore to his wife was so strong that with all the cunning a madman will sometimes exhibit he had watched his opportunity until the best time to retaliate.

Friends coming home to neighboring houses had witnessed the struggle and run to my rescue. He escaped, but was afterward captured and confined in the Jefferson insane asylum, where he now is.

I never board a train but what it all comes back to me—the wild ride among the drifting shadows and my encounter with a madman.—Waverly Magazine.

Saved by a Trick.

"The funniest thing I ever saw happened to a young man in Arkansas. He was fresh in politics and was making his first run for the state legislature. He was running against a man who had been there for two terms consecutively. At one of the meetings the young man accused his opponent of supporting a measure that was very distasteful to the constituents of the county. 'And,' he said, grabbing the house journal on the table before him, 'I have the record on the gentleman and can prove what I say.' 'I deny it,' said his opponent, 'and I assert that the gentleman can find no such record in the journal.' The young man laughed and began to turn over the pages. He fooled and fumbled for some time and became very much embarrassed. He never found the record, and as this incident was on the eve of the campaign he could not recover from the mistake.

"After the election was over it developed that the old stager in politics had while fooling with the journal on the night of the meeting torn out the three leaves which contained the objectionable part of the record, and the trick saved him."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Dog and Kitten.

A correspondent sends to the London Spectator the following anecdote:

The servant man of a family took a kitten to a pond with the intention of drowning it. His master's dog went with him, and when the kitten was thrown into the water the dog sprang in and brought it back to land.

A second time the man threw it in, and again the dog rescued it, and when for the third time the servant tried to drown the dog, as resolute to save the little helpless life as the man was to destroy it, swam with it to the other side of the pool, ran all the way home with it and deposited it before the kitchen fire.

From that time the dog kept constant watch over the kitten. The two were inseparable, even sharing the same bed.

WIVES FOR MINERS.

WHOLESALE IMPORTATION OF MAIDENS FROM EUROPE.

Businesslike Matrimonial Arrangement That Is Really a Very Good Thing—Revival After Three Centuries of a Colonial Practice.

One of the most striking incidents of a late and most successful novel tells how the settlers in Virginia in the early days imported wives from the old country, paying for them in tobacco. It will doubtless come as a surprise to many people to know that the very same method of obtaining a wife, all except the tobacco, is in decided vogue in America at the present day. Substitute Pennsylvania for Virginia, for the tobacco a sum in American cash, for the Virginia Englishman a Polish, Hungarian, Italian, Russian or Slavonian coal miner, for the bonny daughter of England a maid from the continent of Europe and for the seveneenth century the opening days of the twentieth and you will have the romance complete.

For a number of years times have been very good in the Pennsylvania coke and coal regions. Coke workers and coal miners are averaging $3 a day. Of the 40,000 or 50,000 men employed in the mining country at least four-fifths are foreigners. They hail from every country in Europe where there is a surplus of men who seriously object to being drafted into the standing armies. By devil ways these men reach our shores, pass the inspection at Ellis island and are carried to the coal regions of Pennsylvania. They are hard workers, and their lives are wearisome at the best. But they are certainly in the great majority of case industrious, frugal and saving, and it is not long before they accumulate a fund of cash. Then, not unnaturally, their thoughts turn to matrimony. But in the coal regions men outnumber eligible women at least ten to one.

In some few instances the miner has left behind him in "the old country" a wife and children. As soon as he gets "on his feet" in this land of promise he sends for them, and a new home is added to the sum total in the mining town. In still other cases the miner's flannel shirt hides the burning heart of a lover, and the object of his regard has also been left behind to await the coming or making of his fortune. The case of the man with the

CONCORD.

On June 16, 1797, Paul Revere, who was at that time grand master of the Masons of Massachusetts, signed the charter which instituted Corinthian lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Concord. From that date until the present time regular meetings have been held and the ancient charter is still in the possession of the lodge, which is one of the oldest in this state.

Sunday the lodge celebrated its 104th anniversary with a large attendance of members and visiting brethren.

The worshipful master, George W. Hopkins called a special communication which was held at the lodge rooms at 2. The members, with invited guests, numbering in all over 20, then marched to the Trinitarian Congregational church, where exercises were held as follows: Organ prelude, Mrs. G. H. Shaw, vocal selection, "Lead Kindly Light," by the Schubert Male quartet, violin solo, "Largo," Miss Edith L. Winn; vocal selection, "Sunset," Schubert quartet; scripture reading, Brother Rev. Loren B. Macdonald; baritone solo, "Hosanna," Mr. W. W. Walker; prayer, Rev. George A. Edwicks; violin solo, Berceuse, Miss Edith L. Winn; sermon, Brother Rev. Loren B. Macdonald; song, Mr. Martin and Schubert quartet; benediction, Brother Rev. Loren B. Macdonald; postlude, Mrs. G. H. Shaw. Rev. Mr. Macdonald spoke on the "Brotherhood of Man," and took his text from Psalms xxxiii. 1. Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

He spoke of Masonry, of its power for good, of its democratic tendencies. He regarded Masonry as a school and believed it closely adhered to and extended it would not be long before, with co-operation, industrial peace, no more war and arbitration, the brotherhood of man would be made perfect.

At the close of the exercises in the church the procession was formed again, and returned to the lodge room, where the visiting brethren were entertained with refreshments.

The following lodges sent large delegations: St. John's, of Ayer, Simon V. Robinson, of Lexington, Charles A. Welch, of Maynard, Thomas Talbot, of Billerica, Monitor and Isaac Parker, of Waltham and Meridian, of Natick.

The well-known performer, "Bob" Hyde, has been secured as an attraction for the lawn party, next Wednesday, in aid of the Visiting Nurses' association. Dancing will be another feature.

HARVARD NOTES.

The Memorial society of Harvard has decided to place suitable bronze tablets on the graves of the six presidents of Harvard who are buried in the graveyard of the First Parish church. This action is rendered necessary by the fact that the present inscriptions on the tombstones are fast becoming undecipherable, that on the grave of Uriah Oakes being in the worst condition. A tablet will be placed on the grave of the latter at once, but the smaller tablets will not be placed in position until next season.

Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the poet, gave a reception at the Longfellow estate, from 4.30 to 5 o'clock, Wednesday evening, in honor of her niece, Miss Frances Appleton Dana, and her nephew, Mr. Richard H. Dana, Jr., children of Mr. Richard H. Dana, whose estate joins that of the Longfellow's. It was a class day reception for Mr. Dana, who graduates this year at Harvard, and a "coming out" party for Miss Dana. About 700 invitations were issued, and the cards were very generously responded to. A large open tent was erected to the north of the house, where dancing was enjoyed. A dainty spread was served at tables located on the beautiful lawn. Miss Appleton and Miss Dana also received in the Longfellow house.

Miss Norma Waterbury of this city, a student at Radcliffe college, won the $100 Sargent prize for the best translation of an ode of Horace. This competition was open to both Harvard and Radcliffe students, and one of the latter captured the prize. Miss Waterbury is a freshman at Radcliffe, and lived formerly in Newton. Her translation of the ode was published in 1892 by Georgeanna W. Sargent, in memory of her father, John Osborne Sargent, Harvard, '90. The translation required is a metrical one of a lyric poem of four lines.

President Eliot, of Harvard, has invited 100 Cuban teachers to attend the summer school here. One hundred attendants for the Cuban exhibit at the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo, sailed for New York Saturday on the steamer Morro Castle. The police band of 60 pieces left by the same steamer.

Commencement exercises at Harvard opened Sunday with the baccalaureate sermon by the Rev. William DeWitt Hyde, D. D., LL. D., of Bowdoin college, in Appleton chapel, at 4 p.m.

GOLF AT THE OAKLEY CLUB.

At the Oakley Country club links Monday afternoon there was a mixed foursomes competition vs. bogey, which was won by Miss Whitney and W. M. Whitney, by a score of 2 up. The summary: Miss Whitney and W. M. Whitney, 2 down; Mrs. and Mr. W. M. Richardson, 2 down; Miss S. Russell and J. B. Russell, 3 down; Miss Porter and J. G. Thorpe, 3 down; Miss C. Mackay and W. G. Brown, 4 down; Mrs. and Mr. J. G. Fletcher, 4 down; Miss Fiske and N. F. Ayer, 10 down; Miss C. Harding and R. R. Stanwood, 11 down.

In the morning there was a handicap stroke competition, won by B. C. Holder, Jr., with a net score of 75. The contestants finished in this order: B. C. Holder, Jr., R. R. Stanwood, Percy Dewey, C. C. Converse, T. P. Curtis, C. E. Hubbard, W. Austin, B. F. Harding, J. N. Halliwell, W. M. Whitney, J. G. Cobb, M. T. Whitney, S. H. Smith, P. H. Appleton, C. I. Travelli, E. D. Osgood, P. C. Stanwood, A. J. Wellington, C. M. Compton, W. G. Brown, A. Fletcher, J. M. Hunnewell, E. E. Williams.

Arlington Heights.

The Sunshine club met with Mrs. C. H. Whitaker of Oakland street, Wednesday afternoon. After a sitting at whist, the first prize was given to Mrs. C. Parsons, and the second prize went to Mrs. T. A. Jernegan. Refreshments were served at the close. The next meeting of the club will be with Mrs. Alexander Livingstone, of Cliff street.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Dow and son, Warren Dow Jr., who have been spending some weeks at their father's, Joseph Dow, 45 Claremont avenue, have gone to Hyde Park, N. Y., from which place Mr. Dow goes to Colorado on account of his health. Mr. Dow spent several months at the sanitarium at Rutland, and returned a few weeks ago.

Mrs. Carrie M. Warren, of Montvale avenue, Woburn, formerly of Claremont avenue, is spending a week in town, calling on her old friends and enjoying the meeting of the Sunshine club, of which she is a member.

The following children of the Locke school have not been absent or tardy for the school year ending June 20: Lena Smith, Arthur Spencer, Grace Barr, Nina Drew, Katharine O'Donnell. Honorable mention should be made of George B. Bannister, William Bouleau, Edward Schuchmacher, Lloyd Goodwin, Fenno Derby, Lillian Bacon, Earle Cox, Edwin Soderquist.

PARK AVENUE CHURCH.

Sunday morning the pastor spoke on "A Lesson from the Battle of Bunker Hill." Loyalty to the principle of each one's right to be free and independent in one's right to the largest manhood or womanhood was dwelt upon. The day was helpful and restful to mind and body.

The Sunday school of Park Avenue church is preparing a picnic next Sunday, at Billerica, in a beautiful grove on the bank of the Concord river.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

An entertainment by the "Little Folks" of the Arlington Heights Baptist church will be given Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock. All who have listened to the children at their Sunday school concerts will be pleased to hear them and glad to encourage them by their presence. The proceeds of the concert will be used toward defraying the debt incurred in building the church.

The fourth annual picnic of the Arlington Heights Sunday school, held at Orchard Hill grove, North Lexington, Monday, a very pleasant time was had, each one seeming to take in the general enjoyment. Games of different kinds were participated in, young and old. Basket lunches were the order of the day, but made social by families joining in groups, and making digestion good by the laughs and jokes so continuously indulged in. During the day there was a baseball game between Walter Harris's and Burton Savage's teams, resulting in a victory in favor of Harris's team. The game was a very interesting pitching contest. There were two special cars and about 25 present.

The Young Men's league of the Arlington Heights Baptist church held the last meeting of the season with Merwin L. Streeter, 49 Claremont avenue, Tuesday evening. A pleasant and enjoyable time was had. Refreshments were served. The league was formed last November, and has a membership of 16. During the season, debates were held at the homes of the different members, which proved to be of mutual benefit and afforded much pleasure.

The Ladies Aid met at the home of Mrs. Miles, Vine street, Wednesday afternoon. Constitution and by-laws were adopted, and about a half-dozen new members added to the membership roll. The society meets at the home of Mrs. Manley at the next meeting, July 3.

Two well attended services were held Sunday in Crescent hall. The Sunday school is increasing. The Young People's meeting last Sunday evening was the largest yet.

An official board meeting was held Monday evening at the home of Fred J. Harding. It was decided to hold an entertainment in Crescent hall next Wednesday night. It will consist of vocal and instrumental music, together with impersonations and readings. Miss Sadie Allen, the soprano, will sing; also the young ladies' quartet from First church, Holy Bricks, a very entertaining reader, will give several selections. Ice cream and cake will be served after the entertainment.

Preaching by the pastor, Walter G. Smith, tomorrow morning at 10.45. Miss Sadie Allen will sing. In the evening, Rev. Mr. Gurnsey, of Winchester, will preach.

Two well attended services were held Sunday in Crescent hall. The Sunday school is increasing. The Young People's meeting last Sunday evening was the largest yet.

An official board meeting was held Monday evening at the home of Fred J. Harding. It was decided to hold an entertainment in Crescent hall next Wednesday night. It will consist of vocal and instrumental music, together with impersonations and readings. Miss Sadie Allen, the soprano, will sing; also the young ladies' quartet from First church, Holy Bricks, a very entertaining reader, will give several selections. Ice cream and cake will be served after the entertainment.

ARLINGTON BOAT CLUB.

The A. B. C.'s aquatic sports at Spy pond, Monday morning, entertained a crowd for about two hours. The contests were all well arranged, and but for accidents, delays between the events would have been short.

There were five entries in the novice singles. Frost, Homer and T. Wood were in the first trial race. Wood was the last to cross the line. Freeman defeated Whitaker in the second trial, and the finals found Frost, Homer and Freeman the contestants. The race was a good one, with all three men bunched together. Frost had a slight lead up to a few feet of the finish, when a slip-up allowed Freeman to win by a small margin.

Johnson defeated Damon in the senior single scull race by less than half a length. The race was pretty from start to finish. As both boats turned the last flag Damon was slow to recover himself, and Johnson took a big lead. The margin narrowed at the finish so that until the boats crossed the line it was hard to judge which would win.

The canoe tugging match which promised considerable fun and excitement was not up to expectations, owing to an accident. In one boat was Johnson with the paddle, and E. P. Puffer with the pole with a boxing glove attachment on one end. Hunton paddled the other boat, with Damon wielding the pole. Instructions were given the pole men to try to catch each other out of his canoe by pulling him with the pole. When the word was given to begin, the two men commenced to spar with the poles, but suddenly the canoe broke in two, and Puffer grabbed his adversary's boat with his hands, tipping the occupants into the water. For this, the match was awarded to Hunton.

There were but four contestants in the tub race, which was easily won by Puffer. The others were T. Wood, Johnson and Walter Grannon. The race was between the two large floats from one to the other and back again. The first man to get a spill was Johnson. He went overboard before he had made any headway, and then Grannon, who was water and went down. He tried to get into the tub again, but gave it up after two vain attempts. T. Wood took a swim in the pond before he reached the home-plate, and Puffer was the only man to arrive back to where he started. Without so much as getting his feet wet, Frost and Freeman won from Bennett and Hunton in the double working boat by a length, in a spirited contest. They were followed by Walter Grannon, who gave an exhibition row in a single shell, going twice the length of the pond in 55 seconds.

The four-oared race was twice rowed. The first time it was found that one of the boats, during the start, had drifted some distance, which gave the victory to the boat manned by Hunton, bow; Johnson, 2; Wilder, 3; Bennett, 4; and Grannon, 5. The second time the crew naturally protested the race, and it was rowed over after the buoy was reset. The same crew won again, but had no time to spare. The defeated crew were Damon, bow; T. Wood, 2; H. Durkin, 3; Lunsford, 4; Clock, coxswain.

The novelty race furnished the most fun of the forenoon. It was a swimming race between six contestants, who were obliged to add to their attire three times at three stopping places. They started from one float attired with tall hats, and on the last turn to go back to the starting place each man had to have a pair of overalls, a coat and an umbrella. Damon won the match with E. Wood a good second. This closed the events of the day. It was witnessed by a large number of spectators, among whom were many ladies.

The Arlington Boat club had a walk-over Saturday afternoon, on Lawrence field, rolling up a score of 25 to 6 against the T. B. Baseball association of Billerica. The features were the all-round playing of Gray, who made six hits out of seven times at bat, and the fielding of Leach. The score: Innings..... 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
